ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is has been an extremely rewarding and stimulating experience to have worked with Shri R.M. Bapat Reader, Dept. of Politics and Public Administration. His criticisms have been very perceptive and his suggestions always useful. He has also been very patient and encouraged me throughout the period of our working together. And for the completion of this thesis I owe him a very sincere thanks.

Next I wish to thank the Head of the Department, Prof. N.R. Inamdar for the co-operation and encouragement he has given me throughout the study.

I am very thankful to Prof. R. Sunderajan of the Department of Philosophy, Pune University for his comments on the second chapter. They have been very useful in improving the content of the arguments.

I am grateful to the U.G.C. for granting me a scholarship which enabled me to travel to Dehra Dun, Calcutta and Delhi to meet several Radical Humanists as well as for the collection of relevant material.

My sincere thanks to the Jaykar Granthalaya staff, the Servants of India Society's Library staff, the S.P. College Librarian and the Fergusson College Librarian for extending all their co-operation and making available the relevant books and journals. I am also thankful to the Nehru Museum Archives at Delhi for providing me the facilities to view the micro-films as well Roy's manuscripts of the unpublished writings.

Mr. S.N. Puri who is in-charge of the Renaissance Institute at Dehra Dun has been extremely generous in his co-operation. He invited me to the Radical Humanist camp at Dehra Dun in 1982 which provided me the opportunity and occasion to meet several Radical Humanists and hold discussions with them. Mr. Puri also arranged comfortable lodging and made my stay at 13 Mohini Road at Dehra Dun a memorable one.

My sincere thanks to Justice V.M. Tarkunde for assisting me in getting membership to the Nehru Museum Archives at Delhi. I am also thankful to Tarkteerth Laxman Shastri Joshi for granting me a long interview. It was a stimulating discussion and I gained from it.

My collection of Roy's books was made possible by Shri. S. Sengupta in-charge at the Renaissance Publications at Calcutta. He assisted me in procuring many of Roy's books which were out of print. I am therefore indebted to him for making available the basic material for this study.

The Ecumenical Christian Centre at Bangalore deserves a special mention. They permitted me the use of their library and also provided me a comfortable residence. This enabled me to write out a large portion of the thesis.

I must admit here that without the co-operation of the authorities of the Symbiosis Law College, where I have been teaching for the last two years it would have been impossible to complete the study. I wish to thank Principle S.V. Kulkarni and Mrs. Beena Inamdar Prof-in-charge, for granting me study leave to enable me to complete the thesis.

Through various stages of my study, several friends have helped me in many ways. They have offered very useful comments and suggestions and taken a keen interest in my work. In particular I wish to thank Ratnakar Tripathi, Narendra Panjwani, Sudhir Sonalkar and Ashok Upadhaya. I am also deeply indebted to my friends Haimanti Banerji, Uday Chouhan, and Samrita Gopal Singh, who have helped in so many ways, and in particular untiringly and meticulously helped me with the proof-reading of the manuscript.
I am also deeply indebted to my family members especially my parents who have encouraged me and extended all their assistance and my father-in-law who has taken a keen interest in my work and offered me useful suggestions.

I am also very grateful to so many friends who may not have been mentioned due to lack of space but who have helped in many different ways.

And lastly, a special mention of thanks to my husband Vijay Lele who has been involved in my work since its inception. He has always taken a keen interest, discussing various ideas, offering very useful suggestions and provided me the morale to keep on working when I was in difficult situations. I am indeed very thankful to him for everything.

And last of all I am extremely grateful to Mr. Uday Kurtkoti and able assistants Mr. Thite and Miss Shahina Shaikh who have done such a fine job of typing, photocopying and binding. I am also thankful to Mrs. Kavita Kurtkoti who has assisted in the production of the thesis in many ways.
