ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

At the very outset, I am thankful to my Guide Prof. Harshad P. Thakur, School of Health Systems Studies, Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Mumbai; he played a crucial role in providing technical inputs and suggestions throughout the study period. The Doctorate Advisory Committee (DAC) members, comprised of Prof Sanjay P. Zodpey and Prof Shankar Das, contributed significantly during development of the proposal, data analysis and report writing. I am indebted to both the DAC members. This research was supported by a Wellcome Trust Capacity Strengthening Strategic Award to the Public Health Foundation of India and a Consortium of UK Universities. Without the funding support of Wellcome Trust (UK), the data collection couldn’t not have been carried out in a smooth manner. I am grateful to the Trust, and the Secretariat located in PHFI-Delhi office for funding this study and providing all timely guidance. Last, but not the least, I am thankful to the department of health and family welfare, government of Odisha for providing all cooperation during data collection from the field during Oct 2013-Aug 2014. My special thanks to the Mission Director, NHM, for granting permission for data collection from six sample districts under the guidance of the Chief District Medical Officers. The Medical Officers (MO), RKS members, patients, community members and the programme management units at block level played critical roles during data collection. My hearty thanks to all the study participants.

From Public Health Foundation of India, the President, Prof K Srinath Reddy approved my request for PhD enrolment, for I am grateful to him. Successive Directors of Indian Institute of Public Health, Bhubaneswar, Prof Sanjay P. Zodpey, Dr Subhash Salunke, and Dr Lipika Nanda always encouraged me to focus on the study and complete this research with priority; this helped me to generate and sustain the level of motivation during the entire course of data collection, analysis and thesis writing, for I am thankful to all of them. Colleagues at IIPH provided critical inputs, timely insights into the data analysis and report writing, for I am indebted to all my colleagues.

The blessings of my parents, profound contribution of my wife and son towards completion of this study can’t be described in words. I am indebted to them – this thesis is a tribute to all their sacrifices. Friends, colleagues and critiques played critical roles in refining the thesis, for I feel indebted to all of them.

Bhuputra Panda

Oct 2016