Acknowledgements

I wish to thank the following persons:

Dr. Tejaswini Niranjana, for an intellectual rigor which never failed to energize me, for a political commitment which I respect, for a warmth and generosity which contributed in no small measure to my happy days as a student, for investing so much in all of us.

The Indian Council for Social Science Research for a generous fellowship that enabled my research.

The Faculty, Department of English, University of Hyderabad, for their help, support and encouragement.

Mr. Murthy and Mr. Raja for helping out in numerous ways, for dealing with my perpetual confusions, for being the "department".

Anveshi, Research Centre for Women's Studies, Hyderabad for giving me that important "other" space which made all the difference.

Professors Donna Haraway, Angela Davis and James Clifford of the History of Consciousness Program at the University of California, Santa Cruz for permission to audit their lectures during my brief and homesick stint there. Professor Haraway and the students of "Feminist Theory" set my writing-ball rolling with their extensive and extremely perceptive critical comments on earlier drafts of my work. My thanks to all of them.

The Faculty, Dept. of English, Stella Maris College, Madras for their help at various stages of this work.
Dr. M. S. S. Pandian, Dr. A. R. Venkatachalapathy, Dileep Kumar and Ravindran for their support and their willingness to help. Without them, this thesis would have been an up-hill task.

The librarians and the staff at the Periyar Rationalist Research Centre, Madras, and the Roja Muthiah Research library, Madras for granting me permission to use their material.

My loved ones – Ajanta, Angelina, Anita, Chandrika, S. Jayasree, Nagalakshmi, Praveena, Rekha, Uma Maheshwari.

Satyanarayana and Narendra for being best friends.

Gangaji for help with formatting my work.

The campus, for its leisure, its energy, its youth.

My parents-in-law for standing in as parents, for giving me a home here in Hyderabad.

Rajumama, Malathi aunty, Krishnan mama and Rukmini mami, for their concern and affection.

Caleb, Padma aunty, Naryanan uncle, Usha, Visalakshi, Jyothi, Meena, Madhavan and Rohit for being "family" in many different ways.

Hema and Murthy, as always, for being my guardian angels.

Little Kaveri for missing me when I was gone.

My mother, for giving of herself in so many unnamed ways, for giving me the space to grow.

Mani, for putting up with my Ph.d nerves, for being there when I needed him, for caring in so many ways.
