Acknowledgements

All praises and thanks to Allah for His blessings and benevolence upon me.

I am extremely indebted to Dr. Nikhat Taj, my supervisor for her generous encouragement, continued support and guidance and supervision. She has been very kind in training me and helping me to build the framework of this research work. This thesis could never have been accomplished in the present form without her intellectual and dedicated inputs. She also inspired me to be a part of various Seminars and Workshops related to my field.

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks and profound gratitude to my teachers Prof. Asif Shuja (Chairman, Department of English, Aligarh Muslim University, Aligarh), Prof. Syed Nuzhat Zeba (ex-chairman), Dr. Asim Siddiqui, Dr. Munira T and all other teachers of the Department who supported my candidature and laid the foundation of my critical sense of observation.

Thanks are also due to seminar in-charge Mr. Khan Parvez Rafi, seminar attendant Mr. Aqeel Ahmad, computer operator Mr. Suhail Ishaq, and the office staff. Also, the rest of the members of the Dept. of English for acting as my critical guides and contributing in collection as well as analyzing every piece of information that I have used in the study and for handling the official procedures related to this research.

It is my pleasure to be able to thank:

- My parents, sisters, brother for their affection, prayers, inspiration and encouragement, generous and beneficial suggestions – they continue to be my support system.
- The University Grants Commission for providing me the monthly fellowship to meet the various requirements of research.
• Maulana Azad University, Aligarh Muslim University (Aligarh), British Council (New Delhi) and Seminar Library, Department of English (AMU).

• Shameram, Sunil, Yusra, Pooja, Farha, Vinita Di, Yusuf, Sumbul, Naukhaiz, Zainab, Rahnuma, Shoaib and Saahil whose friendship and help matter much to me.

• Deep sense of gratitude is due to the students and fellow research scholars of the Department of English for their participation in the collective urge to investigate the premises of this thesis.
