ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This academic endeavour of mine would not have been possible without the help of a number of people, both in Nepal and India, who with their kind co-operation and support have made this research work a reality.

I am greatly indebted to my supervisor, Prof. P. Sahadevan for his guidance, invaluable suggestions, moral and material support during the whole work. I cannot express my feelings in words to acknowledge his guidance and support which he has rendered to me for this achievement.

I am also grateful to Prof. S D Muni for his guidance and moral support to complete my thesis. I also express deep solidarity and gratitude to all the faculty members and staffs of the South Asian Studies Division, School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University for providing an opportunity to write this thesis and regular guidance and suggestions.

I am also thankful to the authorities of JNU library, South Asia Foundation library, Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis (IDSA) library, Teen Murti library, American Information Resource Centre, SAARC-Documentation Centre, National Archives, New Delhi, and Tribhvan University Central Library, Kathmandu.

I am grateful to the Government of India and Indian Council for Cultural Relation, New Delhi, for providing me a research scholarship for carrying out this research work. I express my deep gratitude to Shyam Saran, Ranjit Rae and Ashok Kumar who have been always encouraging and inspiring me to do a research on this particular area.

I would also like to thank, most profusely Prof. Lok Raj Baral, Krishna P. Khanal, K.P. Malla, Krishna Hachhethu, Dhruba Kumar, Dev Raj Dahal, Om
Gurung, and Santa Bahadur Gurung for their valuable suggestion and discussion on this topic.

I am highly indebted to my whole family including my uncle and aunt who have always encouraged and supported me to complete this research work. I am indebted to my elder brother and Bhabhi. It is very difficult to express my gratitude and sentiments in few words as they never reflected their burden to see my future progress and supported me in all throughout my life.

I am also grateful to all those persons who directly or indirectly helped me, including authors of various books and articles from where I have collected facts, figures and opinions during my research work to complete this thesis. But it is difficult to mention the names of all of them here because the number of those people is very large. My heartiest thanks goes to my friends Mayilvaganan, K. Yhome, Umashankar Prasad, Arup Kumar Deka, Bharat Ratnam, Deepak, Uddhab, Indira and Govind Subedi for their help, suggestions and co-operation in different stages of this work. I have also benefited from the discussions with C.K. Lal, Dr. Haribansh Tripathi, Prof. Ram Mohan Mahato, Hari Bansh Jha, T. N. Jaishwal and Mahanth Thakur, Jaiprakash Gupta, Hridesh Tripathi and other eminent Political activists of Nepal.

Beside I am obliged to all those academicians of Nepal and India who helped me in completing of this thesis. I am also very much grateful to all the Madheshi people, activist, and intellectuals, for their kind support during my fieldwork.

Last but not least, I am thankful to my nephews, Navin and Pravin and niece Nidhi, for their patience on my absence for long and helped me morally during this work.
