A researcher needs to have destination, direction and route plan. I took off in March 2007 with my Guide. I could escape the gravitation force, explore the horizon of language acquisition and now I am proud to have a safe landing because she was my pilot. A kite somehow feels disturbed when it is controlled by the tiny thread. But I know what happens to it when that thread is broken. She held my thread with firm and assertive state of mind but always with caring and motivating attitude. She showed me the destination and directed me with specific route plan towards the destination. I salute Dr. Lakshmi with deep gratitude.

“You have the flair for research” - the sentence that ignited my mind towards research, was written in the first draft of my post-graduate dissertation. I admire the author of this sentence, my own teacher who guided me in my M.A. and M.Phil dissertations. I thank Dr. A. Joseph Dorairaj for giving me the first spark

‘Where you do’ is as important as ‘what you do’ - Gandhigram Rural Institute was my choice, not just because of the nostalgic continuation but because of the academic atmosphere too. My registration, examination, reports - everything was on track. I thank the authorities of the institute. I am grateful to Dr. M.R. Kubendran, Dean, and the whole team, at Faculty of English and Foreign Languages for making my journey smooth. I thank the non-teaching team, especially Ms. Mahalakshmi.

Permission to do the research and the experiments encourages a researcher. I got the due support from the authorities and colleagues. I gratefully remember Fr. Joseph Panampuzha, my former Principal, Fr. Berchmans Thomas, present Principal, and all my colleagues. I thank my students, for their co-operation with me in the sessions and tests.

Technical support and guidance cannot be forgotten. My research got complete when it had the final touch by the statisticians. I am deeply thankful to Ms Nicy, Dhanya and Seema, Centre for Mathematical Studies, Pala for their help.

Resources empower a researcher. Libraries of Gandhigram Rural Institute, various Teacher Education Centres, colleges and schools enlightened me. I am grateful to all librarians, research scholars and teachers.

I express my deep gratitude to Dr. Vinod, Associate Professor, Bharathidasan University, Thiruchirappally, for his guidance and help.

I thank Mr. Shilu for helping me in DTP works.

When somebody goes for an expedition, the family suffers. My family has to cope with my thoughts and behaviour for the last four years. I respect them all. I thank my wife Sithara, my daughter Minna, my parents, relatives and friends.
