CONTENTS

Preface

Acknowledgements

CHAPTER 1 INTRODUCTION
Community – Community information – Community information needs – Approaches for assessing the information needs; assessing the users' information needs; assessing the publics' information seeking situations; direct and indirect information providers – Community information services – Review of literature; community information: general aspects, community information needs; everyday information needs, community information providers and sources; role of public libraries, types of communities, reading interests' habits, utilisation of leisure time; computerised information services, state of the art reviews on community information, use and user studies, etc. – Research in Indian Context – Objective and scope of this investigation – Organisation of the contents of the thesis.

CHAPTER 2 MATERIALS AND METHODS
Introduction – The Setting – Materials, choice of the sample, Basanti Colony, Bandamunda, Chhend, Old Rourkela, Rourkela Railway Colony and Banglatoli, identification of the respondents – Methods; the questionnaire, personal interviews; recording and tabulation – Sample characteristics.

CHAPTER 3 FINDINGS
Introduction – Information providers; identification of direct information providers; identification of indirect information providers; information providers to different problems – Reading interests, reading newspapers, subscription of magazines, reading of books – Utilisation of leisure time, hearing of radio programmes, visiting cinema; watching TV programmes, popular TV serials – Library consciousness, knowledge of the respondents to local libraries, willingness to accept library services, willingness to pay nominal cost for the library services, reasons for unwillingness to accept library services, willingness to avail advisory services in the locality, willingness to travel a distance for advisory services, reasons for unwillingness to avail the advisory services.

CHAPTER 4 DISCUSSIONS AND CONCLUSION

Information needs, information providers, information seeking situations, types of communities, areawise awareness of the respondents, communitywise awareness of the respondents, prominent information providers to problem categories – Reading interests – Utilisation of leisure time – Library consciousness – Advisory services – Suggestions – Conclusion

REFERENCES ..... 322-362

APPENDICES ..... 363-370