ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I take this opportunity to pay abundance of thanks to the Almighty Allah who has blessed me with courage and knowledge to accomplish this research work.

First and foremost, I am greatly indebted to my teacher, mentor and supervisor Dr. Gopal Krishna Sahu, Assistant Professor, Department of Mass Communication, AMU Aligarh, who encouraged me to pursue this PhD programme and with profound patience went through the manuscripts and provided time to discuss issues pertaining to my topic. I owe special gratitude to him whose guidance, advice and care for my research enabled me to complete this study. His intellectual observation, wide academic experience and knowledge have been a source of inspiration during my research work.

I am extremely thankful to Prof. Nighat Ahmad (Director, Centre for Women’s Studies, AMU Aligarh) for her patronage and guidance that have served as a direction for me. Prof. Ahmad extended endless help, which I duly acknowledged.

I profoundly thank Prof. Shireen Moosvi (Former Director, Centre for Women’s Studies, AMU Aligarh), a great academic who motivated and instilled faith in me to pursue research in Women’s Studies. Her invaluable help and gracious cooperation lent me great support in fighting the odds at various stages of my research. I humbly thank Prof. Moosvi for enabling me to achieve the highest academic degree through this study.

I shall be indebted to my teachers at Department of Mass Communication, AMU Aligarh, where I developed my passion for raising voice for the deprived sections of society through journalistic writing. I must declare that mass communication as a discipline has been a beacon, which showed me the path to life. All my endeavors in research and academia are the offshoots of my association with this subject of study. A long-standing obligation is due to my teachers Prof. N A K Durrani, Prof. M Shafey Kidwai, Prof. Afrina Rizvi and Dr. Pitabas Pradhan who inculcated in me the spirit of inquiry in research.

I am equally thankful to the teachers associated with Centre for Women’s Studies, AMU Aligarh whose ideas have been the primary ingredient of my research. I owe special thanks to Prof. Asim Siddiqui, Prof. Farhat Hasan, Prof. Imtiaz Hasnain, Prof. Syed Shamir Hasan, Prof. Shehroz A Rizvi, Dr. Syed Ali Nadeem Rezavi, Dr. Azra Musavi,
Dr. Syed Jabir Raza, Dr. S K Ehteshamuddin Ahmed, Dr. Shadab Bano, Dr. Juhi Gupta, Dr. Aziz Faisal, Dr. Huma Hasan, Dr. Tauseef Fatima and Dr. Tarushikha Sarvesh.

I am profusely thankful to my friends at AMU, Aligarh and outside who during my research work have been sparing time to discuss academic and professional issues with me besides providing rich and invaluable inputs. Among those, I extend special thanks to Mohammad Tariq Iqbal, Avneesh Kumar, Saiba Khatoon, Asif Khan, Shuez Abidi, Sarah Kidwai, Gargi Gaur, Faraz Hasan, Suhail Ahmad, Mazahir Husain, Imran Ali, Shahzad Alam, Sarfaraz Mir, Mujeeb Liyakat, Touheed Akhtar, Mohamamd Waseem, Mohammad Hammad and Muntaz Numani for their persistent cooperation and support. I am also thankful to the research scholars at Centre for Women’s Studies, AMU Aligarh.

My deepest thanks are due to media professionals, journalists, writers, feminist scholars and intellectuals for their willingness to discuss with me the issues related to women and media operation in depth. I have been fortunate to have their friendship and support of many such intellectuals who made my research authentic and relevant. I am especially indebted to Ziya us Salam, Abdul Ghafoor Danish, Sunita Aron, Syed Ubaidur Rahman, Nadim Asrar, B K Parashar, Ashish Tripathi, Arshi Rafique, and Mohammed Anas.

My colleagues at Banasthali University, Rajasthan have been a great support and help to me who supported me to concentrate on my PhD work. I am especially thankful to Prof. Manju Singh for her relentless support and invaluable professional guidance during this period.

I am deeply indebted to the Ministry of Minority Affairs, Government of India and University Grants Commission for granting me the fellowship that really helped to devote my energy and potential for this challenging task of research. The staff of Maulana Azad Library, AMU Aligarh especially Mohsin Raza and Ahmad Faisal needs special mention for making me available the necessary research materials and facilities to carry out my research work smoothly. I am highly grateful to the Centre for Women’s Development Studies, New Delhi and Women’s Studies & Development Centre, University of Delhi for giving me opportunity to access the relevant material related to the research work.

I wish to express my thanks to all the non-teaching staff in the Centre for Women’s Studies, AMU Aligarh, especially Sajid Islam, Mirza Waseem Beg, Ashhar Kamal, Avez Akhtar Warsi, Shoeb Saeed, Mohammad Sharique, Seema Rani, Mohammad Rizwan, Nikhat Hameed, Sameena Saman and Suresh Kumar for their continuous support and cooperation. I am equally thankful to the non-teaching staff of Department of Mass Communication especially Dalveer Singh, Sagheer Ahmad, Azhar Ali, Mohd Nazeer and Mohd Salman for their generosity. I also thank Mohd. Ghufran and Arshad Ali who toiled hard to type the draft and give it final shape.

This thesis would not have been possible without the active and patient support of family, which is a great motivation behind the pursuit of research. I owe a very special thanks to my beloved mother Mrs. Abida Khatoon who has been a permanent support for me. She provided me all that mental comfort which was needed in this pursuit. I must admit and register that she was the one who not only motivated to pursue Ph.D. but was also instrumental in providing emotional support. I owe special thanks to my siblings namely Shakira Khatoon, Zaibun Nisha, Salman Akhtar, Badare Alam and Sheerin Saeed who have always wished to see me attain the highest academic distinction. They have always been my great support and source of motivation. I would like to thank them all for being with me through the difficult times and making this task easier.

I, at this stage, am unfortunate of not having my father around who left for his heavenly abode in the midst of my academic career. He had always wished me a great success and mental satisfaction, but he is no more to witness me accomplished this task.

I intend to acknowledge every single individual who came across me during the course of my research. Without having any intention to leave out, there are scores of people whose names and generosities would remain unrecorded but definitely acknowledged. I apologize to all of them and appreciate their concerns with the core of my heart.
