The rational use of different resources like land, labour, water, plant nutrients, plant protection materials, machinery and implements, seeds etc. is very crucial for increase in agricultural production, productivity and farm income, for improvement in the living standard of rural masses and for growth with social justice. Being born and brought up in rural environment in West Bengal I have devoted myself to address various issues in agriculture and particularly to examine resource use patterns and resource use efficiency in West Bengal’s crop agriculture where farming system is dominated by the marginal farmers.

I am deeply indebted to my supervisor Dr. Pranab Kumar Chatterjee, Retired Professor of Economics, University of Kalyani, for his most precious and excellent guidance and cooperation at each step of my research. Without his able supervision, it would have not been at all possible for me to complete this study.

I gratefully acknowledge the constant support and encouragement received during my study from my respected teachers and non-teaching staff of the Department of Economics, University of Kalyani. I am particularly indebted to Prof. Madhusudan Dutta, Head of the Department of Economics, University of Kalyani, for his very useful academic and official help.

I wish to record my sincere thanks to the sample farmers in particular and people living in rural areas in general for their kind cooperation and providing me necessary information for the purpose of this research. They made me think about different new issues and aspects of agriculture.

I express my thanks to the Department of Economics and Statistics, Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India and to the Directorate of Agriculture, Government of West Bengal for the access given to me to their collected farm level data and various publications.

I am also indebted to the authorities of the University of Kalyani for providing me with Research Fellowship during 1995-1999 and other academic facilities to conduct my research work smoothly.

I am extremely grateful to the Governing Body of Chakdaha College for granting me about three months special study leave for completion of my Ph.D Thesis.
I am thankful to all my colleagues of Chakdaha College for their cooperation to complete this study.

This Ph.D Dissertation owes its fulfillment principally to my wife Dipika Basu, Lecturer in Economics, Basirhat College, who has always encouraged and inspired me with her insights and sagacious comments at all stages of this work.

I am very grateful to my parents and mother in law for their constant encouragement and inspiration in pursuing my higher studies. Without their affectionate indulgence and help it would not have been possible for me to bring this study into light.

Lastly, I would like to put on record my grateful thanks to my brothers and sisters who have been constant sources of inspiration and help during the course of my study.

I am solely responsible for the limitations of my work.

Date: ...2006

Arun Kumar Nandi
(ARUN KUMAR NANDI)
Lecturer in Economics
Chakdaha College
West Bengal