Unless one is a real genius, it is nigh impossible to pursue and produce a fruitful piece of research on by oneself. One necessarily has to bank upon a number of friends and colleagues to steer the ship of research to the shore. The same applies to the present dissertation which would not have seen the light of the day unless the necessary help or guidance was received in abundance from my colleagues and friends. The list of those instrumental in seeing the work through may be long, but I cannot omit to acknowledge the great debt that I owe to them.

I desire to convey my most sincere regards and deep sense of gratitude to my respected teachers Dr. Premendra D. Dwivedi, Principal Scientist, Food Toxicology Division, CSIR-Indian Institute of Toxicology Research (CSIR-IITR), Lucknow and Prof S. K. Jain, Head, Department of Biotechnology, Jamia Hamdard, New Delhi for their most valuable guidance, supervision, constant encouragement and fruitful discussion which enabled me to carry out these investigations.

I also express my sincere sense of indebtedness to Dr. Mukul Das, Chief Scientist, CSIR-IITR, Lucknow for his painstaking help, guidance, keen interest and support which helped in bringing up the dissertation to the present shape. I am very thankful to Dr. Kausar M. Ansari and Dr. Anurag Tripathi, Scientist, CSIR-IITR, Lucknow, for their valuable suggestions and keen interest in the present study.
I express my gratefulness to Dr. K.C. Gupta, Director, CSIR-IITR, Lucknow for providing requisite laboratory facilities and for his interest and support.

I am thankful to Prof. Rajendra Prasad, Prof. Rajiv Garg, Prof Surya Kant and Dr. BH Giridhar, King George Medical University, Lucknow for their support in the clinical studies carried out at the Department of Pulmonary medicine.

My sincere thanks are due to my seniors Dr. Amita Misra, Dr. Rahul Kumar, Dr. Suchitra, Dr. Vivek Misra and Dr. Manjari Misra and for their willing help, immense cooperation and throughout moral support.
