ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

“To strike, to seek, to find, and not to yield”

This line by Alfred Tennyson had always kept me in awe as I secretly admired the valiant, resolute and determined Ulysses who set forth in pursuit of knowledge beyond human bounds. Never had I imagined how religious could one become in pursuit of one’s goal. Four years back when I thought of pursuing Ph. D in Management, it was more by choice than by chance. I knew knowing was not enough, exploring and applying it was something that mattered the most. And yes, it demanded passion, optimism, commitment and determination. Now as I stand on the edge of its completion, I look back in retrospection only to find the indispensable assistance and guidance of those who were instrumental in letting me achieve my goals. And here I pen down my heartfelt gratitude to these guiding stars who have made my dream a reality.

When the light sharply fades and the soul loses its way, it is the guide and his guidance that turn the blackest night into day. To begin with, I render my gratitude to my reverend guide, Dr. Aayushi Gupta for her unmatchable direction, immeasurable support, invariable inspiration, and an unfathomable commitment towards excellence. She has been there to steer and accelerate my progress every single day. Not only has she been my friend, philosopher and guide, but also a guru who ignited the spark of research, by widening the horizons of my thoughts.

Next I extend my special thanks to someone who guided me, assisted me, and mentored me from behind the curtains, Dr. B. S. Nagi. He is a man of few words, a man of indisputable dignity and modesty, who gave new dimensions to my approach and shared a number of ideas which were novel and ingenious in their own way. His peerless experience, exposure and exquisite knowledge in the field of social science research proved to be the pillars of my work. Had it not been for his backup, his ruthless spirit of idea generation, his timely advice and tender care, this thesis would not have been feasible. He trusted me and I could trust myself. The onus for the successful completion largely lies upon his aid and presence. His vibrant presence and a positive outlook towards everything helped me in every situation and built up an energetic and encouraging atmosphere where I could feel the power of synergy.

The sapling could have never blossomed into a flourishing tree, had the esteemed JIIT family not shown trust in me and my work. I extend my pure reverence and gratitude to Chief Operating Officer, Dr. Y. Medury; Vice Chancellor, Prof. J.P. Gupta; Director, Shri T. R. Kakkar;
Members of Advisory Board Prof. S. K. Khanna and Prof. M. N. Faruqui for their valuable advice and suggestions. I would like to make a special mention of our reverend Dean of Academics and Research, Prof. S. L. Maskara for showing trust in me and my work. His unwavering motivation rekindled the flame of my efforts and inspired me to advance in my academic quest. His altruistic nature of helping and unconditional love and support gave me the much needed direction. I am also thankful to all the faculty members and the non-teaching staff of the JIIT for being very supportive in every aspect.

Many a time and oft, while working out on some problem, I would go astray only to find myself standing in the myriad of limitless possibilities or unlimited impossibilities. It was during those dead-end situations I realized the worth of my friends and colleagues Santosh Ma’am, Swati, Sharmistha, Anuja and Arpita. Their out of the box thinking and perfectly timed suggestions helped me a lot in my progress. I also wish to express my heartiest gratitude towards my mother-in-law, father-in-law, parents, uncles and aunts, brothers and sisters. Without their support, understanding and motivation, this work of mine could not be framed in this thesis.

I would be nothing without the teachers who taught me to count from 1 to 100 and say A to Z. Here I express my profound thankfulness to all many teachers who have taught me in the past. Their patience, piousness, selfless encouragement and appreciation have given me the strength for taking this most significant academic challenge.

And not to miss the vivacious and pulsating companionship of my husband, Anan Paul, who was always there to energize me and invigorate a sense of responsibility in me towards my Ph. D. His back end support, his constructive thoughts, his effervescent company always charged up the surrounding and instilled in me a fresh vigor and prepare me for dynamism as I walked to reach my destination. His belief gave me a zealous inspiration to attain the unattainable heights of accomplishment. Words would fall short if I were to describe the kind of faith and conviction Anan held in me. I would simply say when he touched my hand in support; I knew, I could touch the sky.

The piece of acknowledgement would be unfinished without referring to the blessings of the Almighty, the Supreme Power who always guides my soul in the quest of this knowledge.

I apologize for any omissions left in the thesis.
