Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

Chapter 1: Introduction

1.1 Introduction
1.2 Geographical and Temporal Location: The City of Mumbai in the 21st Century
1.3 Central Concerns of the Thesis
1.4 Central Concepts: Defining Terms for my Purposes
1.5 Contribution to Knowledge
1.6 Methodology
1.7 Limitations of the Thesis
1.8 Chapter Plan for the Thesis

Chapter 2: Reflections on Some Relevant Scholarly Debates

2.1 Thinking about Sexual Modernity in India
2.2 Sexuality and Questions of Consumption
2.3 Some Debates on Sexuality and Spatiality
2.4 Reflections on the Possibility of an Egalitarian Architecture

Chapter 3: The Middle Class Woman and the New Spaces of Consumption

3.1 Introduction
3.2 Shrinking Public Spaces and the New Destinations
3.3 Public Spaces and the Moral Police
3.4 The New Spaces of Consumption
3.5 Middle Class Women and Gendered Consumption
3.6 The New Spaces of Consumption: Examining Mall Spaces
3.7 Gendered Embodiment in the New Spaces of Consumption
3.8 Articulating Desire: Women’s Narratives of Consumption
3.9 Rethinking the New Spaces of Consumption

Chapter 4: The Public Display of Private Sexuality: Case Study of Lingerie
4.1 Introduction
4.2 The Changing Face of Lingerie Display
4.3 Displaying Lingerie in the New Spaces of Consumption
4.4 Lingerie Advertising: The Private Location of Public Intimacy
4.5 Masculine Men wear Sexy Underwear Too
4.6 Desirability, Shame and Privacy

Chapter 5: Intimacy, Transparency and the Structures of Morality in the New Spaces of Consumption
5.1 Introduction
5.2 The Construction of Heterosexuality: A Lot can Happen over Coffee
5.3 The Design of Coffee-shops and the Construction of Public Intimacy
5.4 The Limitations of the New Spaces of Consumption
5.5 Some Concluding Notes: The Global Coffee-Shop

Chapter 6: In Lieu of a Conclusion

Bibliography