CHAPTER 1 INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 2 REVIEW OF LITERATURE
- 2.1 Personality and Consumer Behaviour
- 2.2 Self-theory and consumer behaviour
- 2.3 Altering the Self: towards an improved self
- 2.4 Measurement of the Self-concept
- 2.5 Self concept, Body concept and Social Comparison
- 2.6 Self-Evaluation and Social Comparison Theory
- 2.7 Self Evaluation – Evidence from research on eating disorders
- 2.8 Self-awareness
- 2.9 Persuasibility and consumer behaviour
- 2.10 Personality Factors related to self-evaluation, self-awareness and persuasibility.

CHAPTER 3 SCOPE AND METHODOLOGY
- 3.1 Introduction and statement of the problem
- 3.2 Objectives
- 3.3 Theoretical background
- 3.4 Scope of the study
- 3.5 Significance of the study
- 3.6 Variables in the study and measurement
- 3.7 Hypotheses
- 3.8 Pilot Study and Development of Tools
- 3.9 Data Collection
- 3.10 Statistical Methods and Analysis
- 3.11 Limitations of the study

CHAPTER 4 DATA PRESENTATION ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATIONS
- 4.1 Sample Profile and demographics
- 4.2 Factor Analysis and Data Reduction
- 4.3 Relationship of variables under Factor 1 Domain
  - 4.3.1 Self-Esteem and its relationships with other variables under factor 1
  - 4.3.2 Relationships among variables under Factor 2
  - 4.3.4 Relationships among variables under Factor 3 (Persuasibility Domain)
- 4.4 Relationships between the surrogate variables (between factors)
  - 4.4.1 Self-Esteem and CSI1
4.4.2 Self-esteem and Public Self-consciousness

4.5 Self-Esteem, Public Self-consciousness and Consumption of Personal care products.

4.6 Persuasibility and Use of personal care products

4.7 Binary Logistic Regression
   4.7.1 Logistic Regression – an introduction
   4.7.2 Variables and coding for Logistic Regression
   4.7.3 Logit Results

CHAPTER 5 DISCUSSION OF FINDINGS

5.1 Summary of Findings

5.2 Discussion
   5.2.1 Self-Evaluation
   5.2.2 Self-Awareness
   5.2.3 Moderating role of self Evaluation in the relation between self awareness and consumption
   5.2.4 Persuasibility

CHAPTER 6 CONCLUSIONS AND IMPLICATIONS

6.1 Conclusions

6.2 Implications

6.3 Scope for further research
