ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am indebted to my supervisor Prof. B.D. Chattopadhyaya for his sustained and profound encouragement and played a key role in present form of my thesis. His guidance and constant support remained the base rock of this research. I learnt the tools and techniques of research with him. Despite his busy schedule he always provided me time for discussion and analysis of the facts. I am also grateful to my supervisor Prof. Vijaya Ramaswamy for her support and encouragement.

Besides I would also like to thank the entire faculty and staff of the Centre for Historical Studies for their support.

My thesis owes a lot to those staffs of Archaeological Survey of India whom I met during my field work to Vidisha, Bhopal, Jhansi, Gwalior, Raipur and Bilaspur. Apart from them I thank to the numerous known and unknown people of Madhya Pradesh and Chhattisgarh. It was their hospitality that made me work there easily during my field works.

My father was the source of inspiration for the research on Vaiṣṇavism. Papa, Mummy and Didi; Ritu, Iva, Mona and Nidhi encouraged me during the period of research both financially and psychologically.

My friend, Vinod stood by me equally in ups and downs of university life. My friends Chhaya, Soniya, Kiran, Akil, Sangeeta, Bijoya, Anita, Alifiya, Girijesh, Pawan and Vidya were the constant support during the research work. I am grateful to Kusum for her night burning oils along with me for the completion of this thesis.

Lastly, I must thank all the staffs of the Archaeological Survey of India Library, CHS Library and Central Libray, JNU, American Institute of Indian studies, National museum library and ICHR library for their help.
