ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the first place, I would like to record my deep sense of indebtedness and gratitude to my supervisor Dr. G.Ram, Professor, Department of Sociology, Assam University, Silchar for his extraordinary supervision, advice, guidance, motivation, enthusiasm, immense knowledge and valuable suggestions from the very early stage of this research to carry out and complete the work. I am especially thankful to him for his stimulating suggestions and encouragement. His guidance helped me in all the time of research and writing of this thesis. I could not have imagined having a better advisor and mentor for my PhD study.

I am thankful to Prof. B. K. Behera, Head, Department of Sociology Assam University, Silchar, for his kind support and to all the teaching and non-teaching staff of the department for their cooperation and support extended during the course of the work. I acknowledge the cooperation of the library staff of Assam University, Silchar, during secondary data collection for the research work.

I have to appreciate the guidance given by all the experts from other departments of the university who were present while presenting seminar papers at different stages of the research. Thanks to their advice, encouragement and insightful comments. I am grateful to Mrs Mujoo & Dr. Mujoo for enlightening me at the first glance of research. Furthermore, I would also like to acknowledge with much appreciation the cooperation of the respondents, who spared their valuable time in course of this study and shared with me their confidential information without which I could have never been able to see the thesis in present form. Special thanks go to my friend Ms Sujata Bhattacharjee who helped me, accompanied me to the field in sunshine and rain and stood by me in thick and thin as a strong support while collecting the data. Apart from the efforts of myself, the success in this project depends largely on the encouragement and guidelines of many others. I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the people who have been instrumental in the successful completion of this project. I would like to express my greatest appreciation for Mina Das, her mother and sister.
