Acknowledgements

This research work has been extremely challenging.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisor, Prof. Zoya Hasan, for the support and guidance provided in countless ways.

The unfailing encouragement given by Prof. Pralay Kanungo is highly appreciated. My sincere thanks to faculty members of Centre for Political Studies-Prof Sudha Pai, Prof. Valerian Rodrigues, Prof. Shefali Jha, Prof. Amir Ali Prof. Rajarshi Dasgupta, who have provided insightful comments on the work. I would take this opportunity to also thank my teachers at Presidency College, Kolkata, for their farsightedness and dedication in introducing students to the academic world.

The intellectual and informal discussions with Srimati Basu, Nitya Rao, Joyati Gupta, Ujjwal Kumar Singh refined the arguments presented in this work.

There are colleagues and friends who have helped in various ways. I wish to acknowledge the support of my friends who have read drafts of this manuscript and made excellent comments and suggestions, especially, Adnan Farooqui, Bashabi Gupta and Sudeepta Ghose. My activism and participation in various international and national conferences and workshops have also helped me to understand the diversity in discrimination and disadvantage that women face. I am particularly thankful to all respondents in the villages of West Bengal and Bihar as well the hosts who took the pains to keep me well in their houses for months. Special mention to my students who have questioned gender hierarchies in everyday practices in their classroom discussions and sharpened my ability to notice patterns of socialization that influence women’s lives.

I am grateful to the staff of the Parliament Library, the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, CWDS Library, Kalindi College Library, National University of Juridical Sciences Library, National Institute of Rural Development Library and Women’s Development Centre Library in University of Delhi.
My greatest debt is to my family for the strength and support to complete this work. They have been a constant source of inspiration. To begin, my grandmother, Dr. R.R. Tagore in her account of the personal feminist struggles has inspired me to develop strategies for activism. Baba and Ma have enabled me to think out of the box and have always encouraged me 'to do what I want to do'. My sister, Asmita Tagore has read many drafts of the manuscript and provided her legal expertise at various stages of this work. Finally, I would record my deepest gratitude to Praveen Kumar Bharti for having faith in me and helping me in all possible ways to complete this work.

This work is dedicated to them.
