Acknowledgement

My father is a strict man when it comes to studies. During my primary education (class III), I flunked in one of the subjects and scared of my father's beating I ran away from home with a pledge to never come back again. However, fortune struck and I was rescued by an unidentified Muslim man at Dongargad, Madhya Pradesh. He provided me shelter, care and love and safely handed me over to my parents after 3 days. Now, whenever I reach to any stage of my academics, I sincerely remember that face. This work is dedicated to this stranger.

For the completion of this thesis I am grateful to many people for their personal and intellectual support. I begin with Professor Valerian Rodrigues, my Guide and role model since my Master's, and who introduced me to the challenges and pleasures of intellectual work. I convey my sincere gratitude to him, for his patience, perseverance and insightful inputs. His constant guidance, care and encouragement throughout my higher studies have helped me in pursuing this work with a genuine sense of academic commitment. I believe that without his critical engagement, diligence and appreciation this study could not have been conceived.

Among the many Scholars cited in the notes and bibliography I must mention particularly Professor Gopal Guru, whose arguments and insights inspired much that I hoped to achieve in this work. I also express my profound sense of gratitude to Professor Imtiaz Ahmad, Professor Pralay Kanungo, Dr. Manindranath Thakur, Dr. S. C. Sharma, Dr. Vivek Kumar, Dr. Rajendra Dayal, Dr. Manoj Sinha, Dr. Rinku Lamba, Satish Jha and Avinash Mishra for their valuable suggestions and support during this work. I am very grateful to Dr. Subrata Panda, who has not only read the complete draft of thesis but also meticulously corrected most of the grammatical errors. My special thanks to my esteemed colleagues, Sumit Mhaskar (Oxford) and Suhas Bhasme (SOAS) have shown great interest in my regular academic works and contributed immense material whenever I was in need.

Research works accumulate many debts, and this thesis has been no exception to that rule. It is not possible to thank here by name many people who have been inconvenienced in one way or another by the demands of this thesis. But I am grateful to all for their sympathy, support, and generally high level of restraint. I would, however, especially like to thank a number of people who have helped me with specific parts of this work. I am deeply indebted to Gunjan Singh for being with me and helping me in my work since my M.Phil days. She is one who read an early draft of the thesis. I am grateful for her precious comments, observations and for innumerable humorous discussions that both of us had on various parts of the present body of work. I would also like to thank Arani Sinha who has enriched this study with great editorial feedbacks. I can never forget all her help—especially her patience despite all my typographic blunders.
There are a few good and loving friends whose names are meaningful only to me and to them. This is time to acknowledge how each one, in his or her own way, has helped me. Here, I must mention the contributions of my friends, such as, Prabodhan, Milind, Manjur, Aftab, Azam, Dhananjay, Samuel Tharu (Jomo), Ishita, Pooja, Vaibhav, Rohit, Albeena, Polomi, Srin, Anita, Adnan, Vikas, Nupur, Prachin, Mogallan, Yashpal, Jahad and Santosh whose intellectual and critical engagement meant a lot to me during this study. I must also thank those who are more than just friends to me; especially Nitin, Padmashil, Danish, Kiran-Abhishek, Sunil and Avinash for their encouraging support and love for me in all these years.

I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to my parents, thanks to whom I am able to think with a scientific perspective. I am grateful to my brother Girish and Bhabhi, Veena for showering me with love and care and for their full faith in this work.

As always, my greatest intellectual debt is to my wife Dr. Ena Panda. The example of her academic scholarship has been an inspiration throughout my career. Without her exhilarating enthusiasm, her willingness to endure impromptu domestic seminars, and her lively companionship, this thesis would have been neither conceived nor completed.
