ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Words can never express the gratitude I feel towards my supervisor Prof. N. K. Chadha, Head, Department of Psychology, University of Delhi, for giving me the opportunity to pursue doctoral research under his supervision and for his angelic guidance throughout the course of my research. I could not have initiated the research work without his motivation and could not have completed it well in time without his support. He has greatly inspired me to work through his words of confidence, knowledge and support that has resulted in the completion of the work.

This research work could not have been possible without the enduring support and blessings of the teaching faculty of the Department of Psychology, University of Delhi.

My mother, Mrs. Anita Mathur constantly gave me resilience to continue work during difficult times. Her conviction in my capacity to do quality research work helped me sail through difficult times. My father, Prof. Navin Mathur, Professor of Business Administration, University of Rajasthan, helped me in every possible way he could. He was my emotional support during this study and continues to inspire me to pursue academics. My brother Arpit and sister Aastha were a constant source of euphoria. Their liveliness and laughter made my task lighter.

Dr. Alok Mathur, my uncle was an incredible help during the phase of data collection. I will also be grateful to my aunt Prof. Roopa Mathur, Head, Department of Psychology, The IIS University, Jaipur, for providing me valuable guidance and pragmatic solutions to many research questions raised during this study. My grandmother, Mrs. Kamla Devi Mathur personifies positive aging and subconsciously her positivity and resilience in old age also motivated me to undertake a research work in the area of aging.

I am thankful to all my friends for clearing several doubts during informal discussions with them. I am highly obliged to all the office staff of the Department of Psychology, University of Delhi, North Campus, for their assistance in the administrative work pertaining to the research work.
This work could not have been possible without mentioning the critical role of the respondents in the study. Each and every respondent was a source of inspiration and I am glad to have made friends with the elderly persons who reside in scattered parts of the Jaipur City.
