ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I thank the many people who helped in the preparation of this thesis. Since I began the doctoral program at University of Mysore, I have had the privilege of discussion with and amongst an extraordinary group of people who have made my stay here intellectually fulfilling, challenging, and enjoyable. Their interaction, support, advice, and patience, have contributed significantly to this doctrinal work in a multitude of ways.

First and foremost I would like to thank my guide, Dr. Ramesh, Associate Professor of Law, Department of Studies and Research In law, University of Mysore, Mysore, for his guidance, support, and patience throughout this process. He has been an incredible mentor, and has guided, encouraged and demonstrated to me a standard of academic achievement and intellectual curiosity. I owe him a great debt of gratitude. I warmly acknowledge his contributions of time and ideas to make my Ph.D. experience productive and stimulating. The joy and enthusiasm he has for this research was contagious and motivational for me, even during tough times in the Ph.D. pursuit.

My heartfelt thanks to Professor P. Ishwara Bhat, Vice Chancellor, the West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences (NUJS), with whom I discussed the subject matter of this thesis work at length before finalizing the topic.

I would also like to thank Professor C. Basavaraju, Professor of Law, Department of Studies and Research in law, University of Mysore, Mysore, for his on-going mentoring role during my academic career. He’s continuous intellectual and academic challenges have substantially contributed to my professional development.

I offer my sincere thanks to Dr. M.D. Krishna, Associate Professor of Law, Department of Studies and Research in Law, University of Mysore, Mysore, for his encouraging words and fruitful discussion.

It is my pleasant duty to thank Dr. T.R. Maruthi, Assistant Professor of Law, Department of Studies and Research in Law, University of Mysore, Mysore, for his contributions to my theoretical information base. I also want to thank, Dr. Suresh Benjamin, Assistant Professor of Law, Department of Studies and Research in Law, University of Mysore, Mysore, for his suggestions and constructive comments.
I have taken the benefit of the services of the staff and officials of the Mysore University Library, National School of India University Library, Bangalore, City Central Library, Bangalore, Administrative Training Institute Library, Mysore, and Karnataka State Open University Library. I am indebted to them for their services and assistance. I warmly acknowledge the assistance of the staff of the Karnataka Lokayukta office, Bangalore for their strong support for this doctrinal work.

I would also like to thank my friends and colleagues for their overall academic support, encouragement, and their empathy. They had always and ungrudgingly helped me during the course of my research work.

Lastly, I would like to thank my family for all their love and encouragement. I gratefully acknowledge Nagamma & Doddamadhanayaka, uncle Bangaranayak, who raised me with a love of science and supported me in all my pursuits. And most of all for my loving, supportive, encouraging, and patient wife M.S. Mangalagowri, whose faithful support during the final stages of this Ph.D., is so appreciated. I am especially grateful to my father-in-Law S. Subbaiah for the constant and unquestioning support that I have received since I embarked upon this path.
