ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In my venture for research work, I was assisted at every twist and turns of the course by my Guide and Guru Dr. Soibam Jibonkumar Singh, Asst. Prof. (Sr.Sc.), Department of Anthropology, Manipur University. His inspiration and support can never be forgotten. He carefully steered me from the beginning to the end of the course. It is not an exaggeration but the bare truth that without his help and co-operation, the present work could not come into this final form. I show my heartfelt respect and gratitude to my teacher.

I gratefully acknowledge, Prabha, Joyshree, Romeo, Bimol, Rabi, Gunendra, Chiranjit, Sharat, Bidyabati, Khellen, Budha, Dilip, Michael, Tomba, Malati, Puspa, Joshila, Vivek and Punil for their help and support extended in one way or another.

I also extended my gratitude and pay respect to my departmental teachers—Prof. W. Nabakumar Singh, Prof. Ch.Budhi Singh, Prof. K. Sharatchandra Singh, Dr. Shyamacharan Singh, Dr. M. C. Arun Singh. With their teachings, inspiration and blessings, I reach at this wrung of academic ladder.

I thank my members of family—parents, brothers, sister-in-laws for their moral support and financial assistance. I also thank Sumita, Sanathoi, Linthoingambi, Yaisna and Chinglemba for their conscience—concern for successful completion of the work.

Despite of the above facts, without willing co-operation of my Chothe friends, the present work could not come into this stage. During the ordeal of field study of the twelve Chothe villages, many kind-hearted villagers extended their helping hands. Budhi, Mamy, Manichandra, Robert, Keidi, Shakhi, Parnorei, Ibochou, Joshel, Neikung, Paingam, Nongban, Chongkham, Rimchong, and many others whom I do not mention their names but whose services that they had rendered shall remain forever in my heart. Their hospitality within their means, their simple and religious life taught me a lot of practical values of life. Though the field work among the naive native villagers is over, their simple ways of life—far from the socially polluted mechanical social life of the city, the enchanting natural beauty of the hills with wild flowers and bushy trees, the salubrious fresh air, the melodious church carols of the village lass mingling with the reverberated sound of brooks and streams mesmerized me. When I recollect all that I feel fresh experience again. I call up their simple, tough marginal life playing merrily on the lap and at the mercy of nature, their well principled life corded tightly by biblical code. The villages snaking in the woods and nested at the backdrop of the bluish hills in the eastern horizon is very romantic but what is more romantic are the people for their high sense of humanism.
