ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The study of ‘Historical geography of Ukhrul and its adjoining areas’ is an inseparable part of a broader study on the historical geography of Manipur. Our aim has been to make it more understandable and unravel a critical appreciation of the geographical forces which have shaped the course of history and moulded Ukhrul into what it is today in particular. Historical geographies are a wide variety of issues and topics. A common theme is the study of the geographies of the past and how a place or region changes through time and gives rise to geographical patterns in which people interact with their ecology or environment and ultimately create the cultural landscape. Ukhrul region has fascinated me since my childhood as I opted for this topic. Many sections of my research have still remained enigmatic though every step has been taken to understand these areas as far and as best as possible.

My gratitude is for my supervisor, Shri. K. K. Das for his untiring and relentless guidance. He has initiated me into the realm of historical geography. At the most difficult times when my research work came to a stand still his encouragement and best directions remained a source of inspiration through out the period of completion of my research work. I am indebted to him for his able guidance.

The process of material collection through field survey and questionnaire has been a difficult one and had it not been for the help received from my friends and relatives who unceasingly supported and inspired me the work could not have been successfully carried out. My heartfelt gratitude is for every chief of the Tangkhul villages for their selfless replies to my research interviews and queries.

The elders of various villages of Ukhrul also contributed through their cherished old oral traditions, stories of their own villages. They narrated the stories and answered our questionnaire without any tiredness. Those ideas have become valuable source materials for my research. I thank all the elders and friends in the villages for giving and providing research inputs to my work.

I am grateful to colleagues for their challenging ideas. My senior research scholars, with love and affection helped me use their materials for writing my thesis. They granted me permission to use their writings, especially from their books and/or thesis.
The information collected from the various NGOs, officials, elders, individuals, friends and relatives has enriched my work to a great extent. They provided me materials, encouragement and related information for my research work.

I extend my gratitude to my wife, HL. Leimila, and my family for their untiring support till the completion of my thesis. I also express my gratitude to my father-in-law for his help in the collection of materials, without which it would have been very difficult for me to complete my work. I thank with gratitude all those who have remained associated with me during the course of writing my dissertation. I am thankful to all especially my child HL. Ngatarmi. He often gave peace to my tired mind. His pranks invigorated me and often goaded me to do my research. My research work is dedicated to my family, especially my child.

At the end, I acknowledge all my teachers of the Department of History who taught me well to stand upright in the face of difficulties.
