3.1 Introduction

The principle of gender equality is enshrined in the Indian Constitution in its Preamble, Fundamental Rights, Fundamental Duties and Directive Principles. The Constitution not only grants equality to women, but also empowers the State to adopt measures of positive discrimination in favour of women.

Within the framework of a democratic policy, our laws, development policies, Plans and programmes have aimed at women’s advancement in different spheres. In recent years, the empowerment of women has been recognized as the central issue in determining the status of women. The National Commission for Women was set up by an Act of Parliament in 1990 to safeguard the rights and legal entitlements of women.

The women’s movement and a wide-spread network of non-Government Organisations which have strong grass-roots presence and deep insight into women’s concerns have contributed in inspiring initiatives for the empowerment of women. However, there still exists a wide gap between the goals enunciated in the Constitution, legislation, policies, plans, programmes, and related mechanisms on the one hand and the situational reality of the status of women in India, on the other.

7. Mahila Sarvangeen Utkarsh Mandal (MASUM) was co-founded by Manisha Gupte and Dr. Ramesh Awasthi in 1987 during their five year stay in the drought-prone Purandar block of Pune district. It evolved out of a commitment to women’s rights within and outside the home, working with a feminist perspective and a human rights approach. MASUM’s primary belief is that people can resolve their own problems collectively with some amount of external support; thus, rather than create dependence on itself, MASUM focused on strengthening people’s perspectives on democracy, equality, secularism and social justice.

MASUM’s community level involvement is primarily with rural women in perennially drought prone areas of Pune and Ahmednagar districts of Maharashtra State. Women's access to health, confronting violence against women, micro-credit, working with youth and children on issues of gender, caste discrimination and peaceful co-existence are some of MASUM’s on-going activities. Political participation of women, both as elected representatives and as empowered citizens and strengthening of child rights through village-based children’s councils (Bal Panchayats) are rapidly growing interventions too. Every programme of MASUM is interconnected with another, so that people’s rights are realised in multiple ways.

Acknowledging that women are not a homogenous category and that multiple systems of domination - such as caste, class and patriarchy operate in an intersectional manner, MASUM pre-dominantly works with subordinated and minority-groups. In order to emphasise people’s participation in decision-making at every level, the staff and leadership is mostly local, especially women from marginalised sections of rural society.

At the state and national levels, we are committed to training and capacity building of NGOs, CBOs and a variety of stake-holders in increasing people’s access to economic, social and cultural (ESC) rights. MASUM is now recognised as a credible training institute on gender, health rights, ESC rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), violence against women (VAW), and dalit and minority rights. We are also involved with campaigns and networks that strengthen women’s rights from the local to the international levels.

15. Adhar Pratishthan Trust is a dignified NGO based in the city of Pune (State of Maharashtra, India). At Aadhar NGO, strive to spread social awareness among rural as well as urban communities for the welfare of human society and bring about constructive socio-cultural change. Their social service programs focus on today’s rampant yet vastly neglected issues. In this light, they conduct Educational Projects, Health Awareness Programs, Self Employment Programs, Women Empowerment Programs, Medical Camps, Rehabilitation Projects (for the Disabled), Child Labor Projects, and Environmental Awareness Programs for slums and rural as well urban areas. Since Aadhar, at its very root, was an initiative by the Indian youth from all sections of the society, so does it chiefly aim to create a wide platform for all youth to come together, join hands and actively participate in reforming and rebuilding the society according to everyone’s rightful needs. Also, the core aim for such a mobilization of youth is to garner among them the spirit to take up social work and be the inspiring activities. In order to understand our work, it is also important to note that Aadhar, unlike numerous organizations in the field today, stands out in two respects where its administrative as well as functional policies are concerned:

They do not take measures to secure government-sponsorship. It has never been a part of our agenda. All our funds are generated from individual contributions by Aadhar’s volunteers, workers and willing contributors. The organization, of course, has a board of directors – founding members of the organization – but the name is only ceremonial. There are no officers as such, no payrolls, no offices; only willing volunteers.

However, environmental awareness, child education, women empowerment and supporting underprivileged communities are our major concerns due to magnitude of these problems. They also manage and uphold “Income Generation Projects” to support needy and poor people. Educational and health camps are organized for tribal communities, slum dwellers and poor (as well needy) people: all of which aims to bring about social, economical and financial stability (and sustainability) to our society. NGO also conducts CSR (Corporate social responsibility) activities for corporate sector industries looking to do social service.

With such aims in mind, Aadhar Pratishtan has defined itself as a Motivator, Guide, Philosopher and Friend of Small organizations. “Aadhar Pratishtan” also believes that, instead of focusing itself on only one activity, it should work for every social issue possible and motivate other organizations to likewise involve themselves in broadening their reach and working for overall development of humanity and its world. The success of their Projects lies in this vision.
