ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Any research attempt is not a simple task of searching something new, unavailable, unseen or lying out of easy way; and especially an academic, scientific research is all the more difficult affair involving the services of a number of persons, such as para-research assistants for routine work and participants in research needed for facilitation and progress of work in the field of research, as well as most important, trained personnel for adequate guidance and successful completion of research undertaken by the investigator. The author of the present investigation in the form of the thesis submitted herewith has pleasure to acknowledge her indebtedness to all such persons who have been instrumental directly or indirectly in lending their active support and co-operation in shaping the work of the researcher. First and foremost person on the list to whom the credit is extended by the present investigator has been Dr. Bipinchandra M. Contractor, a senior lecturer in psychology at G.L.S. Arts College, Ahmedabad, who has served not only as an academic formal teacher to the researcher but more as a family friend, philosopher and guide from the day of the conception of thesis up to the day of its delivery and submission in the proper hands of the University for the evaluation of its worthwhileness, taking fatherly care at every stage. The author who laboured hard and spent much of her energy, time and money under all sorts of guidance from Dr. Contractor at all times finds no adequate words to express her indebtedness to such conscientious guide.

Perhaps of more importance and immediate concern has been the enthusiastic cooperation of Principal Dr. Madhusudan V. Baxi at the same college, who has been a devotedly born teacher interested in the growth and career of all students at his college, the researcher was fortunate to share his expertise at all times. Alongwith all this the investigator enjoyed the most willing assistance from pararesearch workers, such as Dinabala Shah and Aartiben Soni of Vandana School, who helped in collecting parents of their school pupils, to serve as subjects in the investigation, and also Pragna Shukla and others who assisted in collecting data from the co-operative parents collected at the school, besides the data collected from some officers and workers at some banks in Ahmedabad as well as the willing members of Women Associations in Ahmedabad. In the same tone I should recollect the cooperation from the authors of articles and research works, such as, of Dr. Akbar Hussain, Dr. Sudha Bhogle, Dr. D. K. Malhotra, Dr. Pramod Kumar, Dr. Pratiksha Raval, Heena Saxena, Dr. Navin Patel and others who have directly made available their works to the investigator for reference, as well as those authors whose works have been referred to in the list of references at the end. The important assistance has been very willingly rendered to the researcher also by Smt. Paulomi Nagri who has looked after composing and typing on computer that gave beauty and changed the image of the thesis. A sincere line of thankfulness goes to her grace.

Besides this formal academic thanksgiving, my heart throbs with deeper feelings of gratitude to the ever ready, always enduring and everywhere supporting and encouraging members of my devoted family—my father Pramodbhai Sanghvi who has never said "No" to any of my demands, my mother Bhanuben who not only looked after me and my conveniences for the study, but who also took care of my child (just born) when I was toiling, moiling and burning midnight oil to prepare for my research, and also to my loving husband, Divyang for encouraging and sustaining me all along and for putting up with the inconveniences, caused to him by my being engrossed so long in this work. I owe deep gratitude also to my mother-in-law Minaxiblen Mehta, who encouraged me and endured my absence for long during my field work.

Last but not the least important is the fact that any research gains glamour and strength with the use of sound research methodology and effective statistical analysis. By good luck, the investigator could procure such honorary services and expertise of the seniormost and distinguished Professor of Psychology and Research Methodology Dr. A. S. Patel of Baroda, a Visiting Professor at California State University, (U.S.A.), who on his way to United States of America spent sufficient time and accepted to offer his assistance to the researcher, going through the whole format and statistical analysis all through. My heart-felt feelings of deep gratitude shall ever remain due to such devoted Professor and teacher in true sense.

My thanks are once again due to one and all who have contributed one way or the other, been helpful to the investigator in her pursuit of the research.
