Acknowledgements

In initiating, conducting, and completing as sensitive and demanding a study as the present one, I have received help, encouragement and cooperation from a large variety of individuals. It is not an easy task to repay this debt. To the extent it is possible, I am, therefore recording its nature and intensity.

To

my Guide, Professor V.R. Gaikwad, Chairman, C.M.A., Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (IIMA), for suggesting the theme of enquiry, guiding it through and extending constant encouragement and varied support.

Professors D. Tripathi, N. Sheth, T.K. Moulik, P.N. Misra (all IIMA), Dr. Radhika Ramasubban (Institute of Economic Growth, Delhi), Ranjit Roy (Economic Times), and Krishna Raj (Economic and Political Weekly) for clarifying many of my hazy ideas.

350 local resource persons for facilitating my entry into the 33 industrial families and being largely instrumental in ferreting out sensitive information, otherwise not forthcoming.

members of my sample families for permitting me to have a very close inside view of internal functioning of their families and providing access to private papers.

the duo of Pandya and Trivedi of Vikram Sarabhai Library, IIRA and numerous friends from Administrative Staff College of India, Hyderabad, Universities of Bombay and Lucknow, Sarder Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research, Ahmedabad, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Bombay, National Library, Calcutta and Moti Mahal, Lucknow for extending library and referencing opportunities.

ICSSR New Delhi and Sarder Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research, Ahmedabad for sanctioning me grants which enabled part of my field work and library consultation and Dr. Samuel Paul, the then Director, IIRA and Dr. T. S. Papola, Director, Giri Institute of Development Studies, Lucknow for extending institutional support.

my wife, Neelima, and our two daughters, Neera (13) and Nesta (9) for suffering so patiently a rival for attention for 42 long months and for agreeing to spend their rightful individual shares from the family kitty on the expenses of the study.

my friends Ilyas, Kapil, Ashvin, Ram Dhan, Sarvajit, Virendra, Waheed and Dhirendra Narain for emotional support when it was needed most.

I am grateful to each of the foregoing sources. Since I benefitted from their help, it is more than likely that the dissertation too might have gained in the bargain. However, for its inadequacies, which still remain, I am alone responsible.
