I shall be failing in my duty if I do not acknowledge the affectionate and sincere advice received from Dr. H.S. Sengar, Librarian and Head of the Department of Library Science, University of Saugar who helped me in various ways. I would also like to express my sincere thanks to the members of staff of the Jawaharlal Nehru Library, University of Saugar, for facilities offered in the Library. I am also grateful to Shri R.N. Saini, who helped me in various ways.

My thanks are due to the Librarians of the National Museum, New Delhi, and Archaeological Survey of India. I also thank the Curators of the Gujari Mahal Museum, Gwalior, and those of Vidiasha and Sanchi Museums, for giving me all facilities to study their Museums and Libraries. I also thank Shri G.P. Rai for typing the thesis with great care and precision.

Finally a word of personal appreciation goes to each and everyone of my teachers, friends, especially to my friend Poonam Srivastava, who helped me in my work.

I do not find adequate words to express my deep debt of gratitude to my parents and my revered 'Guru' who have given me more than enough.
