ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, with an intense reverence, the researcher expresses his sincere gratitude and thankfulness to his Supervisor and Guide, Dr Kaushik C Raval, Associate Professor & Director, University School of Law, Gujarat University (India), for guiding and helping him out whenever he got stuck; and, more importantly, for showing faith in his capability in conducting this exhaustive research, and thus, imbuing in him the confidence and the will to carry it out as best as he could. His (Dr Raval’s) juristic vision, erudition, enlightening advice and encouragement have made the researcher’s doctoral programme days a wonderful learning experience.

The researcher conveys his deep sense of gratitude to Dr SP Rathor, Associate Professor of Law, Gujarat University for his constant encouragement, inspiration and motivation. The researcher also conveys his gratefulness to all the staff of Gujarat University for their kind support and cooperation.

The researcher acknowledges his indebtedness to Dr Bimal N Patel, Director, Gujarat National Law University (GNLU), Gandhinagar, (India), and to all the faculty members of GNLU for their incessant moral encouragement and academic advice.

The researcher is extremely thankful for the cooperation extended by the staff of the libraries which the researcher consulted for this work; in particular, the rich library of Gujarat National Law University (India).

The researcher’s special thanks are also due to various sources of information, viz, a number of standard books, periodicals, journals, magazines, dailies, the internet, websites, etc. The researcher is immensely indebted to all the authors whose works he has consulted and quoted in this thesis.

The researcher takes this opportunity to pay high regards to his Grandfather (Late Ram Briksha Singh), Uncle (Late Gopal Singh), Aunt (Smt Ram Dulari Singh), Mother (Smt Ram Sawari Singh), and Father (Shri Kanhaiya Prasad Singh) for their heartfelt encouragement and inspiration throughout his (researcher’s) life and for lifting him uphill this phase of life. The researcher owes everything to them. The researcher also extends his profound sense of appreciation and indebtedness to all other members of his family, especially his wife (Mrs Puja Singh) and son (Rishit), but for their continuous support, and providing necessary congenial and proper working conditions, this work would not have seen the light of the day.

And last but not least, the researcher expresses his thankfulness to Art Xerox (Ahmedabad, India), and Kansara Bindery (Ahmedabad, India) for sincerely, efficiently, and uncomplainingly doing the painstaking job of printing and binding this work with utmost cooperation.

Since this work, just like any other, could not have been completed without the guidance, assistance, and support from various quarters, therefore the researcher, once again, places on record his deep sense of thankfulness to all those who helped him, one way or another, in the completion of this research work.

The Researcher
