Acknowledgements

I never imaged that the simple process of conceptualising a research piece would instigate exploration of new aspects about my own self as a social work professional and as a social science researcher. As my PhD guide Prof. Lata Narayan had always kept a motivational and appreciating attitude towards me, her understanding nature, valuable suggestions and insight in to research always helped me in the execution of the study. I express my sincere gratitude for all her support.

I am also thankful to Prof. Devi Prasad for his matchless help to make me understand all the statistical applications of the present study. His flawlessness and generous sharing of study material helped me to developed confidence with my quantitative approach and with the use of statistical packages. He is the best teacher I have ever met. I am genuinely thankful for all the guidance he provided towards the completion of this research. I am also grateful to Prof. Rajani Konantambigi for all her support and co-operation towards the completion of the study. I am obliged to Prof. Kiran Rao for allowing me to use the coping check list. She further provided assistance to understand and interpret the scores of coping check list. I am equally grateful to Prof. Shrivastava and Prof. Singh for permitting me to use the occupational Stress Index (OSI) in my study.

My anxieties about statistical techniques were taken care by Prof P.C. Saxena, Prof. D.P. Singh and and Prof Laxmi Kant Dwivedi. Their timely assistance and tangible suggestions made it easy to resolve the complexities in their applications. I am immensely thankful for their support.

From past four years Rohini has proved to be a strong support for me. She is not only my friend but an inspiration to learn and grow. Without her it would have been tough for me to overcome all the difficulties which I faced during these four years. I am immensely thankful to her for being at my side.

I was lucky enough to have Pooja as my friend. I respect all her genuineness and honesty in a relationship. I appreciate all the care and affection she drizzled on me, especially at the time when I needed them most.
Words are not enough to express my deep gratitude towards my mother and sisters who supported me in all possible ways to complete my study. I would like to make a special reference of Mr. Mansoor, a friend of my father, for encouraging me to pursue my PhD.

I am also heartily thankful to the trained social workers who extended their full cooperation during data collection and without whom this study would not have been possible.

Anjali Dhengle