ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Mere words cannot express my feelings of gratitude towards my esteemed teacher, Dr Shri Prakash, Reader, Department of Economics, Punjabi University, Patiala (India), who is meticulously fast, in thoughts and deeds alike. This piece of investigation owes its completion to his thorough supervision, timely encouragement, competent guidance, ever smiling and benevolent patronage and adequate books facilities, which led me, on and on, to achieve my destination successfully.

My grateful thanks are due to Professor and Ex-Head, Dr H.K. Manmohan Singh and to Dr Govind Khanna, Head of the Department of Economics, Punjabi University, Patiala, for permitting me to work under the supervision of the guide of my own choice and ready help which went a long way in completion of this manuscript.

A special word of thanks goes to Mr. Amarjit Singh, Computer Programmer at Regional Computer Centre, Chandigarh and to Mr. B.L. Kapoor, Lecturer in Department of Economics, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for having done painstakingly the entire Computer programming as well as the data processing work.

A special word of thanks to Mr. Gupta, Assistant Director of Social Welfare Directorate of Haryana; to the librarians of Economic and Statistical Organisation of Haryana and Punjab; and to Mr. R.K. Chaudhary and Manjit Singh, Department of Sociology, Punjabi University, Patiala, for their timely help.

The completion of present study is the result of guidance, affection and well-wishing co-operative attitude of my worthy uncle, Mr. Prabh Dayal, Lecturer in English, Department of Correspondence Courses, Punjabi University, Patiala, and especially to my brothers. To them, I express my respectful and personal thanks.

Besides, I would express sincere thanks to my friends especially to Miss Shashi Garg, Miss Kiran, Miss Indu Tripathi and Miss Shashi Kiran Sharma, for their helpful attitude and refreshing company.

I am much obliged to U.G.C., New Delhi, for financial assistance in the form of Junior Research Fellowship during the tenure of this work.
