ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It was indeed a challenge to select a topic of relevance in today’s fast changing organizational scenario. The topic selected has a profound significance in recruiting and retaining of managers in the manufacturing sector. This piece of work could never have been completed without the dedicated and unstinting efforts of many individuals. I would like to put on record my heartfelt thanks to my guide Dr. James Thomas Kunnanat, Rajagiri College of Social Sciences, for his expert guidance, support and encouragement.

My sincere gratitude to Dr. Asha Gopalakrishnan, Department of Statistics, Cochin University of Science and Technology, for performing an exhaustive statistical analysis of the data, despite her hectic schedule. Words are not enough to thank my friend Mrs. S. Girija who stood by me and trusted my capability to complete this work. I am highly indebted to all the college authorities for their invaluable suggestions.

May I thank all my respondents for their open-hearted response and to their respective organizations for having trusted me with confidential information. I am indebted to my young friends Bindu, Riju and George who efficiently and conscientiously coordinated and managed all the data used in the analyses. Thanks to all my family members for patiently bearing with the demands of the research work. But above all, to the Almighty for having blessed this endeavour.
