ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply obliged to acknowledge my indebtedness to many persons, who have been instrumental in one way or the other in the completion of this research work. At the outset, let me recollect the context that set me on thinking of the title of this research work: A chance phrased, 'Faith as Depth-dimension', caught my attention during a classroom lecture by Dr. C. R. Agera. The more I thought of it, the more fascinating it appeared to me for an investigation: and I took up the challenge. In a truly Kierkegaardian sense, I must think that a certain 'moment' in an ordinary situation can be of vital and decisive significance. I am grateful to Dr. C. R. Agera for making me aware of the possibility of working out this theme. Moreover, I stand indebted to him for his painstaking and patient guidance throughout this work. There were moments when the busy schedule of my profession gave a depressing feeling that I might never be able to work out the thesis. But for the persistent encouragement and inspiration of my Guide kept me afloat in the task of completion.

I am also greatly indebted to the Library staff of the North Eastern Hill University for helping me in every possible way to locate the material that I needed in Books and Journals. I am equally grateful to the Librarian of the Sacred Heart Theological College for his kind permission to avail myself of the excellent facilities thereat.

I stand equally indebted to Mr. K. S. War, who patiently typed out a lengthy draft of the thesis. I would fail in my duty if I were not to make a special mention of Mr. Hubert Marbaniang, Mr. P. Nongpiur and Mr. B. Kharkrang who kindly and gladly helped me in setting and bringing out the final computer-print of the thesis. Such was the devotion that they considered it a privilege to help me. I am overwhelmed by their devotion.

Almost all this research was done at home, and in the process, I have not been the best of a family man. But, with a sympathetic understanding, my wife has been a silent source of strength and comfort, and I owe her a great deal.
