ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The past years have been like being in school again. The days have been in part inspiring, interesting, and interactive and sometimes testing.........! I have seen, heard and discussed lot, and perhaps learnt a little too. It had significant impact in influencing my thought processes and enabled me to better understand of how environmental concerns can inform and improve developmental decision-making processes.

Further, the satisfaction and euphoria that accompanies the successful completion of any task would be incomplete without the mention of people who made it possible. I look back and remember the help extended by many people, in all respects to mould me into the person what I am today. I place my gratitude to all my people who have always encouraged me to pursue my interest and led me on to the right path.

As Patricia Neal puts it, a master can tell you what he expects of you. A teacher, though, awakens your own expectations. I am extremely grateful to Dr. Krishna Raj, Associate Professor, CSEP & my Supervisor, for having taken a personal interest and for guiding me with a great deal of patience, all through for timely completion of this thesis. His advice and involvement were a major source of encouragement and inspiration throughout the period. I sincerely acknowledge the valuable guidance and ideas given by him, at every stage and I feel I could not have got a better person than him to learn the nuances of Doctoral Research. Without his support and guidance, this thesis would have never been completed successfully.

I further express my gratitude to Professor Binay Kumar Pattnaik, Director, ISEC, for the support & the invaluable help extended by him.

Albert Schweitzer stated that, at times, our own light goes out and is rekindled by a spark from another person. Each of us causes to think with deep gratitude of those, who have lighted the flame of light within us. I further express my gratitude to Professor R.S Deshpande, Former Director, Institute for Social & Economic Change, for his precious guidance and invaluable help throughout the thesis and valuable advice.
throughout the course, which helped me in completing this task successfully. His considerable knowledge, disciplined friendly approach and advice will always be a source of inspiration. I kindly acknowledge the valuable ideas and support given by him throughout the course.
