Acknowledgements

I would like to express my deep appreciation and gratitude to all those who have contributed to the process of this Ph. D thesis. It could have been impossible task without the co-operation of number of people.

First of all, it is the great reverence for me to work with Prof. Biswajit Ghosh, my teacher and supervisor, whom I am highly indebted for suggesting me this area of work; he gave patient hearing of my incipient and somewhat confused thoughts many a times and provides then a direction. Though I had moments of despair when I was asked to revise my drafts by my supervisor and my draft was subjected to seemingly unending process of change that incorporates suggestion and carryout correction by him. I realised the wisdom of the entire course of hard work which he made me go through when I completed the thesis.

I am extremely obliged to Dr. Manik Chakrabarty (University of Burdwan) and Dr. Abhijit Guha (Vidyasagar University) who helped and encouraged me in every possible way. I am also grateful to Dr. S. M. Patnaik (University of Delhi) my M. Phil supervisor for giving me a very good exposure on various methodological problems in the study of displacement. I owe a debt of gratitude to him. I am really thankful to Dr. Manish Kumar Verma and Vivekanand Nayak of the Babasaheb Bhabrao Ambedkar Central University, Lucknow for making me enlightened on the different dimensions of socio-economic impact assessment of land acquisition for development project. I would also like to thank Dr. Manoj Kumar Jena (Jamia Millia Islamia Central University) for constantly inspiring me to complete my Ph. D thesis as early as possible.

Further, I express my heartfelt gratitude to Xavier Das of BIRSHA (Ranchi) and other members for providing official document on Jadugura Uranium Mining Project. For accomplishing the work, I have been immensely helped by JOAR and Jadugura people. I am indebted to them for their love and co-operation. Warm thanks to Ghanshyam Biruli, Tika Soren, Kande Kurte, Bajo Besra, and Mangal Soren who offered me their generous hospitality and brightened up many moments in the field and without whom this work would have been an impossible task. I am also thankful to Sri Kandre Mahali, Manager and other office staff of UCIL for their help and assistance.
I am grateful to all my teachers who have contributed to the shaping of the work directly or otherwise. I have consulted the works of many learned authors and all of them are listed in the bibliography. I express my immense debt of gratitude to all of them. My sincere thanks to Indian Social Institute (ISI) New Delhi library, Ratan Tata Library, Delhi University Library, University of Burdwan Library, JNU Library and Haldia Law College Library for the co-operation in making available to me the reports, books and other materials on the subjects.

I would like to thanks all those who helped to produce this thesis and the energetic support they gave me in many ways they have. I would like to especially thank the following individual for the advice, encouragement and contributions: Hemant Kumar Bhattu, Rakesh, Abhishek, Banti, Durga Prasad Shaw, Paresh, Abhilash, Nisha, Bijay, Amrita Bhattacharya and Shashidhar Mehta.

I would like to express my debt of gratitude to my parents who has always been the source of inspiration and providing me everything in my life.

It would be amiss if I do not mention the contributions of my beloved wife Dr. Sadhna Gupta, who took all pains and provided me every possible support to complete the research work. She patiently sat with me on the computer for data feeding and analysis. Her expertise and wisdom were of great help in producing this work with least possible error and presentable. Without her help, co-operation and forbearance, this work would have been a distant dream. I should also acknowledge the contributions of my daughters Pooja and Ashwariya who continuously enquired about the progress of my work.

Finally, I record my sincere thanks to the Prof. Anirban Banerjee, Head of Department, and other teachers of the department of Sociology and authorities of Burdwan University for an opportunity they gave me to register as researcher and submit my thesis for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Sociology.
