ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Accomplishment of this work is the result of the co-operation of many individuals starting from Dr. KC Sankaranarayanan, my supervising guide, former Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences, Cochin University of Science and Technology. I had drawn on the expertise of many professionals - economists, power engineers, irrigation engineers, statisticians and agricultural experts in completing this work. During the survey, many local people had co-operated whole-heartedly. I remember each one of them with gratitude.

At the outset, I would like to thank Dr. KC Sankaranaryanan who had generated in me an interest in the subject of Social Cost Benefit Analysis to the extent of pursuing this subject for my doctoral thesis. In fact, my association with Economics started with my association with him as my teacher way back in 1978, when I was a student of MBA at Cochin University of Science and Technology. I owe a deep sense of gratitude to him. His able guidance and his insightful and patient interventions were there at all stages of this endeavour. The accomplishment of the successful completion of this thesis is due to his able guidance, timely directions and brilliant suggestions. I am happy to mention that it was his case study on Silent Valley, which inspired me to think of this topic for my thesis.

My thanks are due to Dr. Rajasenan, Professor and Head of Department of Applied Economics and Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences for all the help rendered in the successful completion of this venture.
I am extremely thankful to Dr. Balmohan Thampy Director, Institute of Management in Government, and to Mr. Sasidharan Nair, Secretary, Institute of Management in Government who had given me all encouragement and firm support to undertake this study.

I am thankful to Mr. Ajith, statistician and researcher who had helped me immensely not only with statistics, but also with insightful suggestions. I had greatly benefited by the discussions with Mr. M.K. Sukumaran Nair, Faculty of Applied Economics Department, Cochin University of Science and Technology. I also acknowledge with gratitude, the fruitful discussion, I had with Dr. Pushpangadan of Centre for Development Studies, Trivandrum who had pointed out certain useful references.

I am thankful to Ms Elizabeth, Mr. Ramakrishnan and Mr. Raghu, the librarians of the Department of Applied Economics, Centre for Development Studies and Institute of Management in Government respectively.

Engineers of Kerala State Electricity Board, especially Dr. Pavithran had rendered invaluable service in introducing me to the various published materials of KSEB. The names of Mr. Jayabhadrpan, Ms Shreeja, Ms Mini George, Ms Mini P Nair and Ms Philomina Sebastian deserve special mention. I am extremely thankful to the retired engineers of KSEB – Mr Chandy, Mr. Hassan and Mr. Gopakrishnan who had given me clarifications on technical matters. I am deeply indebted to Mr. Thampy and Ms Merina of the Department of Electrical Inspectorate, without whose introduction, I would not have had easy access to the industries.

Engineers of Irrigation Department had rendered immense service. The names of Mr. Matthew Thariyan, Mr. Christy, Mr. Sunil and Mr. Velayudhan are special among them.

I express my sincere thanks to Mr. Nelson and Ms Rasmikkutty of Arakkuzha Krishi Bhavan who had helped me with all the available records. Ms Rasmikkutty had spared no pains to help me. I profusely thank Ms Valsa, Agricultural professional who had spent a lot of time and had given valuable information regarding the technical aspects of irrigated cultivation.

A word of special thanks to Mr. Kumaran Nair of Kudayathur Panchayat and Mr. Soji James of Muttom Panchayat who had helped me to locate the respondents and introduced me to a few of them. I acknowledge with gratitude the enthusiasm with which Mr. Kumaran Nair accompanied me to Idukki region to meet the displaced persons. I am extremely grateful to Mr. Sebi Kochikkunnel and Ms Baby Kochikkunnel who had made my survey of the farmers a very pleasant and educative experience, by locating certain houses and also by giving a preliminary information on the irrigation and agricultural scenario of Arakkuzha Panchayat.

I am extremely thankful to Ms Jaya S Anand who had extended selfless help in arranging materials from various offices at Trivandrum. I am also thankful to my friend and colleague Ms Jazeela, who had rendered all help when needed. A word of special thanks is due to my friends Ms Geetha R and Ms Celine Sunny, whose wholehearted support I could receive at all stages of this project. I am thankful to Mr Ashokan, Regional Director of Institute of Management in Government, Mr Shibu, Ms Smitha and Ms Rejula at the Computer lab, Ms Sreekumari and Ms Yasodha whose advices proved to be of great help while computerising the work. The willing services rendered by Mr. Suresan of my office is being remembered with gratitude. The silent support of Ms Sheela, my colleague was encouraging. I also express my gratitude to Ms Lakshmi and Ms Renuka of the Kerala Press Academy, for their support.

I drew great inspiration from the memory of my father KP Cherian. My mother Ms Mary Cherian and my sister Essy Antony had been continually rendering emotional support to me in my venture and my sister spared no pains in proof reading the work and intervening with useful suggestions. My mother in law, Sosamma Pailo whose silent prayers contributed immensely to the success of this venture is remembered with love.

I wish to remember with gratitude all the respondents to my survey for their co-operation.

The loving presence of my children Jerin and Cherian was source of great inspiration and encouragement. I acknowledge with pride the services of Cherian and Jerin who spent sleepless nights with me in the computerisation of the work. The immense patience with which my husband tolerated my preoccupation and the willingness with which he attended all domestic matters, thus relieving me free for this work, need special mention.

I am thankful to Mr. Prasanth who had remained with me during the last few days of my work, formatting the computerised version of the thesis.

Last but not least I profusely thank the officials of Mahatma Gandhi University with whose cooperation I enjoyed hassle-free transaction of all administrative matters connected with the work.

The list is still only indicative and not at all exhaustive.
