I began this study as a Junior Research Fellow in the Department of Political Science, The University of Burdwan, in 1981. I am grateful to the university authorities for providing me the necessary financial assistance. To Dr. Anil Baran Ray, my teacher and supervisor, I am indebted in more ways than I can describe. He has not only helped me out of my academic problems from time to time with his advice and suggestions, but also boosted my morale with his never failing encouragement.

I am grateful to Dr. Radha Raman Chakraborti, Director, Netaji Institute For Asian Studies, Dr. B.N. Goswami, my teacher at the University of Burdwan, and Dr. Gopal Chandra Khan, Head of the Department of Philosophy of the same University, for their valuable comments and advice. Thanks are also due to Professors Kalyan Sanyal, Arup Maharatna, Sekh Abul Kasem and Dilip Chatterjee for their participation in many lively discussions which stimulated me to think afresh of the theme of the present work.

I record my deep sense of gratitude to my respondents and to the staff of: the National Library, Calcutta, the West Bengal Legislative Assembly Library, Calcutta, the Centre for Studies in Social Sciences Library, Calcutta and the University of Burdwan Library, Burdwan. To Sri Ananta Palit goes the credit for typing out the manuscript.
