ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

Though as a teacher in Journalism I have immense interest in any research in mass media, yet this study on the role of the newspapers of Assam and their editorial policies, 1954-58' is the result of co-operation of many people.

My first gratitude is to Professor Dr. A. Dutta, formerly Head of the Department of English, Gauhati University, now Head of the Department of English, Dibrugarh University, who acted throughout as my supervisor. I could not have completed the study without his unstinting intellectual support and encouragement. I am deeply indebted to him.

I also express my indebtedness to the staff of the National Library, Calcutta, the Assam Tribune, Natun Assam, Assam Express, Gauhati, Jangshilwari of Jorhat, Nahajati of Tepur, Ganatantra of Howgong and Secretarial staff of the Assam Legislative Assembly and Meghalaya, for their kind help which makes this study possible.

My thanks go also to Dr.K. Alam, Reader in Economics, Gauhati University, who helped me in calculating the co-efficient of co-relation figures on the basis of Karl Pearson's formula as shown in Table 'A' of Chapter E5.

Finally, I owe to M. Pangging who had taken special care with inquisitive mind: in typing this manuscript.

Arabiada Masumdar,
