7. REFERENCES

Forster, J.R.M and Wickins, J.F., 1972. Prawn culture in the United Kingdom, its status and potential. Laboratory leaflet No. 27. Fisheries Experiment Station, Conwy, Great Britain, 32 pp.

Temminck and Schlegel by oral administration of peptidoglycan derived from Bifidobacterium thermophilum. J. Fish Dis., 19: 185–187.

Murayama O, Nakatani, I and Nishita M, 1994. Induction of lateral outgrowths on the chelae of the crayfish, Procambarus clarkii (Girard); Crust. Res. 23:69–73

Nakatani, I., Yamaguchi, T and Murayama, O., 1992. Abnormalities found in a chela of Cray fish, Procambarus clarkia (Girard); Res. Crust., 21: 207-209.

Physiological, nutritional and immunological role of dietary β1, 3-glucan and ascorbic acid 2-monophosphate in Litopenaeus vannamei juveniles. Aquaculture. 224: 223–243.

Simonson, J. L and Steele, P. 1981. Cheliped asymmetry in the stone crab, Menippe mercenaria, with notes on claw reversal and regeneration; North East Gulf Sci., 5:21–30

Smith, L.D., 1990a. The frequency and ecological consequences of limb autotomy in the blue crab, Callinectes sapidus Ruthbun, Ph.D. thesis, Univ. of Maryland, Maryland, USA

Spivak, E.D and Politis, 1989. Limb regeneration a common South American littoral crab SRINIVAS, D.S., 2000. Effect of G-probiotic on growth, body composition and survival of giant freshwater prawn, Macrobrachium rosenbergii (De Man) and Indian major carp, Labeo rohita (Ham), M.F.Sc. Thesis submitted to University of Agricultural Sciences, Bangalore., pp. 113

