When I started my life as a PhD student in June 2003, I never thought that this would be a personal journey within myself trying hard to attain this goal. I should first thank God the almighty who is always with me in disguise in all my hard times during this journey. Without his blessing I would never have succeeded. I sincerely wish to express my gratitude to all exceptional persons I met during this journey.

My first words of gratitude must go to Prof. Hubert H. G. Savenije, my promotor, who accepted me as a PhD student. I first met him on 6 October 2003, and from this date his door of room no. 4.77 of TU Delft was always kept open for me. It was he who helped me from the very beginning of my work at TU Delft to the very end. In countless discussions he gave me valuable guidance and suggestions for my work. Without the supporting and encouraging mails he sent to me during my dark times of this journey, I would possibly not have completed this research. I thank you for investing enormous efforts and time to help me with writing and correcting all manuscripts I wrote during this period. Dear professor, I am very proud to be your PhD student and thank you for being my promotor.

The supervision I received from my Co-promotor, Prof. Pieter van der Zaag is something which I admire in my life. I have always benefited from his useful comments, suggestions and constructive discussions. His practical views on my topic were really valuable to me. His excellent skills in English language made sentences in my manuscript very beautiful. Dear professor, I express my deep sense of gratitude to you for being my co-promotor and for always showing interest in my work. Along with my promotors, I admire my local supervisors in Kerala Dr. K. Balan, College of Engineering, Thrissur and Ir. K. R. Anil, College of Agriculture, Trivandrum, who have given me encouragement, support and help whenever I was in need. They took care of my field experiments with coir geotextile while I was away! I am always grateful for your sincere helps in accomplishing this work.

This study would not have been possible without the financial support of CICAT. I am thankful to Mr. Paul Althuis, for the financial and organizational support provided to me. I express my sincere thanks to Dr. Rien Dam for the administrative support given to me, to come to The Netherlands and to do my research here. I extend my thanks to Prof. C. van den Akker, Dr. Kees Maas and Prof. Olsthoom with whom I discussed my thesis in the beginning. I express my sincere thanks to Dr. Ed Veling and Ir. Wim Luxemburg for their timely help and suggestions during this period. I am thankful to Prof. Philip Vergragt for the effort he took in the initial stages of my research programme. I am grateful to Dr. Bert Enserink for his help and support in the beginning of this research. I express my gratitude to all committee members for their comments especially to Prof. Gupta that helped to make significant improvements to this thesis. I express my deep sense of gratitude to the former vice-chancellor Prof. N. Unnikrishnan Nair, former Registrar Prof. Kunhi Krishnan, then RuDAT directors, CEMCOP director Prof. K. Poulose Jacob, Prof. Mohandas, then syndicate members of Cochin University of Science and Technology, India, for the administrative support to do my research under the MHO-RuDAT programme in TUDelft. Prof. Poulose Jacob has always extended his support and help whenever I was in need. Prof. Mohandas was always there to give me useful advices and suggestions. I extend my thanks to the faculty members of School of Engineering and especially to the Civil Engineering Division, CUSAT who have given moral support to me.

I particularly want to thank Prof. Asha Latha Thampuran, who has greatly influenced me both academically and personally and with whom I first discussed this project proposal before I submitted to RuDAT. I express my gratitude to Mr. Subhash Chandra Bose for his whole hearted support in this research and also his help for the preparation of questionnaire. I extend my thanks to Dr. Terry Machado and Mr. P.C Jain who introduced me to Amachal Watershed. I express my sincere thanks to Mr. Ajith Kumar, for his help and guidance in statistical analysis of my experimental results. I am grateful to Reeba and Soumya for their help in the field experiments. I am thankful to my friend Binu Sara Mathew and family for their support and help. Thank you Miren for your cheerful friendship, and thanks to all who are near and dear to me for their support and encouragements in this endeavour. Thanks to Simone, who showed hospitality to me inviting me for dinner occasionally, which always gave me relaxation and a homely feeling in Delft. I was in 4.88 from the beginning of my research with roommates Neeltje and Buket. It is always nice to have colleagues which are also friends. I missed you both in my last year. I express my sincere thanks to the Secretary, Hanneke and the other members of my group in the Water Resource Section. Hanneke was always ready with the administrative support whenever I was in need. Dear Franca, you were always in CICAT to help me arranging numerous administrative and practical things since the beginning of my PhD period. I extend my thanks to Manon Post, Theda and Veronique, Edith Hoek, Rene Tamboer and Rob Nievaart for their timely help.

I thank Mr. Sujith, Mr. Mariswamy and other officials of AHADS, the tribal community in the Attappady watershed for their cooperation and help for the accomplishment of my case study. I am thankful to Karunakaran and especially Priest Abraham Varghese and family for their help in doing my field experiments in the Kumbhaza watershed. I do not know how to thank the community and committee members of the Amachal watershed, for their help and support given to me throughout the project duration. I am thankful to Jayachandran & Lathika, and the family members of this watershed for their love and affection to me. I enjoyed the goodness and fresh air of the rural area during my stay in the watershed.

Accomplishing a PhD work abroad and that too far away from family is something difficult to accomplish. My nostalgia was made less painful only because of Arun (now in UK), Aravind & Archana, Biju & Reshmi, Deepu, Deepa and Jinesh. We lived here like family members. I always waited for the weekends to have lunch and dinner together. We often discussed about the richness of our country and the cultural diversity of different nations. Biju and Reshmi were always here to stretch their hands whenever I was in need of any help. Archana and Aravind were here with help and support throughout this period. I started my PhD life in Zusterlaan along with Deepa. In these four years of life we were sharing our joy and sorrows, sometimes fought as enemies and loved like twin sisters, but we know very well that all these were a part of the stressful research life we had. Jinesh was always here as my friend and brother giving help and moral support throughout this journey. I remember you all for many years to come.

Without the encouragement, support and prayers of Girija and Geetha my sisters, Sudhir and Saju, my brothers-in-law, in fact my true brothers, I would not have succeeded in this endeavor. I express my gratitude to my parents—in-law for their prayers for me all these years. I got the strongest support from the dearest and nearest to me, my husband Kamalasanan. Our debate about almost everything under the sun has increased my capability to think deeply. His strong words always encouraged me to think and act accordingly. Even in his busy schedule he finds time to help in my field works. I thank him deep from my heart for sending me abroad, giving importance to my career and living alone in his work place. Words are stuck in expressing my owe to my small little angel Srilakshmi, who is living away from her parents with my sister. If there is a debt which I can never pay back in my life it is the debt to her childhood. At this age she cannot understand the value of a PhD, but one day she will. Even if thanking a father is unnecessary, I should express my feeling of gratitude for the lessons I learned from his life.

One great pain remains at these end notes; my words are getting stuck and mind withers in front of the loving memory of my mother, who left us like a meteor on 18 February 2005. The word Gratitude becomes insufficient to bear my debt towards her; to the complete motherhood I was gifted. It was from her I first learned the lesson 'Knowledge is Power'. She was the one who lit the lights of my life and still remains as the light of my pathways. I bow my head for your blessings from the heaven...
