I am thankful to Dr. Rajan Gurukkal, Director, School of Social Sciences, for providing me the freedom to experiment. His intellectual insights have helped me pursue my work. The unflinching support I have received from my supervisor Dr. M. R. Raghava Varier and his critical insights has given me the confidence to pursue my lines of research. I am deeply indebted to him and am bereft for words to describe my gratitude because he gave me the intellectual freedom one couldn’t dream of.

The constant prodding, patient listening and polishing of field techniques by Prof M. G. S. Narayanan, Prof. A. Sundara, Prof M. L. K. Murthy, Prof Rabi Mohanty, Prof K. Rajan and Prof Ravi Korisetar has provided the much-needed fillip for the thesis. I have no words to express my gratitude to the Archaeological Survey of India, Trichur circle without which Umichipoyil would never have come to light. I am grateful to K.K. Ramamurthy, K. Sathyamurthy and all at ASI whose support in a large measure has helped me take up this region for study. My friends Selva and Darsana for always being there and helping me with my field work, Viswanathan and family for throwing open Umichipoyil for research allowing a whole area to be examined without any kind of interference.

I should thank the Management of Nehru Arts and Science College for selecting me for the research programme under the Faculty Improvement Programme of the UGC and also the faculty at the Department of History for their support.

My thanks are also due to the Librarian and Office Staff of the Archaeological Survey of India, Library Madras Circle, Thrippur Circle, Deccan College Pune and University of Madras. I am also thankful to the librarian and staff of the School of Social Sciences, for their support throughout the course of my study. To my family I owe it all.
