ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

At the outset, I must place on record my immense and profound sense of gratitude to my Research Supervisor, Dr. K.V. Narayana Rao, Professor and Head, Department of Political Science and Public Administration, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, for his keen interest, constant encouragement and valuable guidance which was of immense help in this study.

I am very much grateful to Dr. G. Sai Baba, Reader in Economics and Dr. M.V. Subbarao, Professor of Political Science and Public Administration, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, who guided me from 1983 to 1985 when I was an interdisciplinary Research Scholar in the Departments of Economics and Political Science.

In the selection of the topic and afterwards I have been benefited by discussions with Dr. D.L. Narayana, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Economics and Member of the Syndicate, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, I gratefully record the keen interest he has shown in me and my work.

My heartfelt thanks are due to:

Dr. K. Kamalanathan, Professor Emeritus, Department of Political Science and Public Administration, for his encouragement in carrying out this work;
Dr. L. Kodandarama Naidu, Professor of Economics, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, for his valuable suggestions and encouragement at every stage; Dr. N. Kamaraju Pantulu, Professor of Commerce, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, for his encouragement and suggestions; and Dr. A. Satyanarayana Murthy, Professor of Sociology, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, for his kind help during the various stages of the work.

Discussions with Dr. N.H. Sitarama Sarma, Reader, Sri V. Chandra Mouleswara Rao, Lecturer, Sri A. Balaramaiah, Lecturer, Sri C. Krishna Reddy, Lecturer and Sri B. Sudhakara, Research Assistant, Department of Political Science and Public Administration, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, have been very helpful in providing clarity to my thinking on the subject. I am thankful to them for the time they spared.

I thank Dr. C. Devarajulu Naidu, Lecturer in Economics, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, for the keen interest and encouragement evinced by him from time to time in this research.

My thanks are also due to Sri Narasimha Raju, Lecturer in Politics, S.G.S. Arts College, Tirupati, Sri V. Chandrasekhara Naidu (TTD) and Dr. V. Reddeppa Naidu, Research
Associate, Department of Economics, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati, who inspired me to take up this work.

I express my gratitude to the officials and non-officials of PRIs who were helpful to me during the study and also thank the heads of the household of the sample of this study.

I am also thankful to Sri Venkateswara University and ICSSR authorities for providing financial assistance to this study.

I have benefitted in the collection of data by the libraries of Sri Venkateswara University, and National Institute of Rural Development, Hyderabad. I thank those authorities for their kind help.

I am thankful to Sri N.P. Sudhakar Naidu, who helped me at the time of collection of data and Mr. K. Chenchaiah, M.A., M.Phil., Mr. K. Gangadharam, Research Scholars, Department of Economics and Mr. Y. Ramakrishna Naidu, who helped me at the time of tabulation for this study.

I am also thankful to my friends who helped me directly or indirectly in this work.

I am thankful to Mr. S.V.S. Thyagarajan, who typed this thesis patiently and neatly.
