ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The successful completion of this thesis was made possible with the encouragement and generous help given by a number of archaeologists, scholars and friends. Mere words will not suffice my deep sense of gratitude to Professor V. H. Sonawane, who guided me throughout and extended his helping hand promptly and cheerfully whenever I came across any difficulty. This thesis would not have reached its logical conclusion without his support and guidance. His constant encouragement, motivation and suggestions have been an immense source of inspiration. I am deeply indebted to him for his unflinching belief in my ability and for being more than a guiding teacher.

I am thankful to Shri Jagat Pati Joshi, DG, ASI for my selection as the first marine archaeologist of the Archaeological Survey of India which provided me the opportunity to enquire in this topic of interest. I would also like to thank Dr. S.R. Rao, who introduced me to this subject and to Shri M.C. Joshi, the DG, ASI for his support and encouragement. I had some very useful discussions with them, which helped me to enhance my knowledge in various fields of archaeology.
I am thankful to Smt. Achla Moulik, the then Director General of the Archaeological Survey of India for providing me the opportunity to carry out my research in this prestigious university by posting me at Lothal, the famous Harappan site in Gujarat. Thanks are also due to Dr. S.V.P. Halakatti for his help and encouragement.

Thanks are also due to Dr. K. Krishnan, for his help and support. I cannot refrain from expressing my sincere thanks to Dr. Ambika Patel and Ms. Mona Parmar for their help. I am also thankful to all the staff members of the Department of Archaeology, M.S. University of Baroda for their kind help at various stages of my study.

Information about ancient ships is very sketchy and scattered. Documentation and study of ships in ancient Indian art was a lengthy work. Award of “Small Study and Research Grant” by the Nehru Trust for the Indian Collections in Victoria and Albert Museum made it possible for me to visit most of the monuments, sites and museums to collect first hand information. I am thankful to the trustees for encouraging me by awarding the grant. Thanks are also due to the Indian Council of Historical Research for granting contingency grant for finalization of the thesis. I am also thankful to the Indian Archaeological Society for their help.
My sincere thanks are due to the Director General and the Directors of the Archaeological Survey of India for their encouragement without which it could not have been possible to complete the work. I am also thankful to all my seniors and colleagues in the Archaeological Survey of India for their help and unending support throughout. They gave their valuable time in advising on numerous occasions with encouragement and understanding of all academic problems and offering constructive criticism.

I would like to gratefully remember all the people who helped me in many ways on the monuments, in the museums and in libraries during my study.

Lastly, thanks are due to my parents, wife and daughter. Their support during every moment of my life cannot be put in words. I am grateful to them to be with me all through.

Alok Tripathi

April 26th 2003