ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

According to John Fowles, every novel since literary time began is a form of quest or adventure. So too is the writing of a doctoral dissertation. Here is my chance to thank all those who have accompanied and guided me on my academic quest in the enchanting woods of fiction, philosophy and literary theory.

First of all, I am truly grateful to my supervisor Professor Dr R.K. Mandalia for his unfailing intellectual support, perspicacious comments on my work throughout the research and useful bibliographical suggestions. I thank him for his friendly interest and advice, which made the completion of my project possible. Many thanks go to Professor Dr Piyushbhai Joshi for his profound knowledge, kind co-operation, sincere encouragement and helpful suggestions throughout the process of this work.

I am highly indebted to Dr J.H. Khan, professor and head of English department, Sardar Patel University, Vallabhidyanagar for his valuable and fruitful suggestions from time to time.

I am not less indebted to the different libraries: the library of Sardar Patel University, the British library, Ahmedabad and the library of A.A. Patel Commerce College, Gandhinagar, for providing me necessary materials pertaining to the research work.

I owe my deep gratitude to the principal, vice-principal and colleagues for their unending support throughout the research work. Special thanks go to my brother-in-law Apurv for providing me the laptop during my stay at vallabh vidyanagar.

I wish to thank my father Mr. Maheshchandra Raval, mother Mrs. Sumitraben Raval and my family members without whose moral, emotional and intellectual support this project would never have been completed. Last but not least, I would like to present my special note of sweet love to my little son Jainil and nephew Deepang for sacrificing their pleasure to accomplish the research work..

Place: Vallabhbh vidyanagar

Date: January 22, 2009.            Vikas M. Raval