ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

With God’s grace it is a pleasure to thank all those people who made this thesis possible.

I owe my deepest gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Ritu Lehal, Professor, School of Management Studies, Punjabi University, Patiala, whose guidance and support enabled me to develop a deeper understanding of the subject. Her enthusiasm for this research, especially concerning women issues, was contagious and motivational for me. I am thankful to her for being accessible and enabling me to draw on her knowledge and experience whilst allowing me space for ingenuity. Her regard for intricate details and constructive criticism pushed me forward and steered my efforts into the present form that I now humbly put forward.

Dr. Pushpinder Gill (Professor & Head) and Dr. A.S. Chawla (Professor & Former Head) and other faculty members of School of Management Studies, Punjabi University, Patiala, deserve my regards for their help, encouragement, valuable insights and suggestions.

I warmly and whole heartedly appreciate the support and understanding of my parents-in-law and the extended family. I’m grateful for their constant and keen help. I am forever grateful to my grandparents and parents whose foresight and values paved the way for a privileged education for me. I’m indebted to my parents for always encouraging wholesome bringing up while providing an ambience where an academic mind is celebrated. I feel blessed to have been able to watch and learn by example from the best. I cannot be grateful enough to my mother for giving me life, and for the counsel and unconditional support to go through it purposefully. My warmest regards to my brother for being the catalyst for most productive changes in my life, for sparking my inquisitiveness and for always answering all my queries patiently. Inadvertently, you’ve been a great teacher. I am grateful to my husband for selflessly and patiently sharing this entire journey with me. Thank you for your constant support and encouragement and for always hearing me out. A big thank u to my little one for providing me the much needed lighter moments and love, and apologies for depriving you of your mommy time.

I am also very grateful for my formative years at St. Mary’s Convent School, Kasauli. It was here that both teachers and sisters alike willed in me the possibility of greater academic pursuits. I’m also thankful to my teachers at UBS, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for their constant encouragement.

This thesis would not have been possible without the statistical help so generously and patiently provided by Mr. S.K. Mahindru. I’m grateful to him for the insightful discussions and to the Department of Computer Science and Application, Panjab University, Chandigarh for allowing me access to their software. I express my sincere gratitude to Mr. Subhash Rahi for encouraging the use of correct grammar and consistent notation in my writings and for carefully reading and commenting on countless revisions of this manuscript.

I would like to express my gratitude to the managers, at the numerous branches of the banks that I visited, for their help. Also, I would like to acknowledge the hundreds of participants who obligingly and patiently gave me their time in responding to the questionnaires.

Thank you all for making this happen.
