ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is my prerogative to express my heartfelt gratitude to Almighty for his blessings and grace for the successful completion of this work.

I am indebted to Dr. Raj K. Gupta, Chairperson of the Department of Education, Panjab University, Chandigarh for providing facilities during the course of the present work and for her timely help and full co-operation.

I express with a profound sense of gratitude my sincere thanks to my esteemed supervisor and mentor, Dr. (Mrs.) Joginder Mukherjee, Head, Department of Guidance and Counseling, Government College of Education, Chandigarh who has not only guided me at each and every step during the preparation of this thesis but also constantly encouraged and inspired me to give the final shape to this research work. Inspite of her compulsive commitments, she devoted her considerable time and energy, gave illuminating and learned advice, wholehearted co-operation and constructive criticism from the inception to the final stage, which made it possible for me to bring out this thesis.

I gratefully acknowledge the help of all the mothers of the mentally challenged children who spent some of their valuable time to fill up the questionnaires and gave relevant informations in the course of this research work, without whose cooperation this research would not have been possible.

I express my gratitude to the various authors, publishers, other educationists and psychologists whose studies have been consulted and quoted in the current piece of work and thank the librarians of all the libraries that I visited for their help during the collection of the review material.

I am at a loss to find appropriate words to express my indebtedness to Dr. S.N. Sharma for his commendable help, valuable suggestions, timely co-operation and constant inspiration which have borne the academic fruit that I wished for. I am also thankful to Professor S. Gakhar for motivating me and providing his benevolent guidance.

My language cannot express the feeling of my heart towards my beloved parents as this endeavour is the culmination of my father’s (S. Hardial Singh) aspirations and my mother’s (Mrs. Kuldip Kaur) inspiration, who provided me the necessary zeal and impetus to bind this work. Their encouragement and blessings have borne the scholastic growth that I aspired. My brother (S. Jaspreet Singh) deserves special thanks for his unstinted support, caring attitude and being a constant source of strength throughout the completion of my work.

I wish to record my appreciation for my loving son, Prince, for his patience, understanding and incalculable cooperation, who not only gave his wholehearted acceptance of my need to finish my work but also inculcated in me the motivation to undertake this effort throughout the tough phases of the study.

I owe my special thanks to my friends for having stood by me and giving me profuse support. I shall always cherish their encouraging words and honest criticism.

I extend my sincere thanks to Mr. Rakesh for his valuable help in computing and analyzing the data.
