ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I wish to place on record my sincere thanks to my supervisor Prof. S. V. Bokil, whose valuable guidance and extreme patience has helped me complete my thesis. I owe him very for having spent a lot of his time having discussions with me, for making valuable suggestions and for correcting my work. I would also be failing in my duty if I do not thank Dr. V. M. Gumaste, formerly of the Institute For Financial Management and Research, whose guidance and discussions were very helpful to me in finalising the plan of study. I would also like to thank Dr. R. M. Honavar, former Director of the Institute for Financial Management and Research, for his active involvement in the research activities and helpful suggestions.

My special thanks are also due to the various Chief Executives and Chief Financial Officers of the Companies whom I had personally visited to collect answers to the questionnaire sent out by me. These officers did not hesitate to give me the required information and answered the questionnaire in spite of their busy schedule.

I would at this juncture place on record my appreciation of the sincere help extended to me by the staff of the library of the Institute, especially Ms. Indira, Ms. Bhanumathy and Ms. Vasantha Balakrishnan. They were able to procure books and other references for me as and when I needed them, even if it required borrowing them from other libraries. The well-stocked library has been a great boon to researchers like me.

The staff of the Computer centre need special mention. Mr. Balasubramanian has been of immense help to me in using the computer facility and did not hesitate to provide new regression packages suitable for analysing data of the nature collected by me. I would like to thank Ms. Malathi and Ms. Nalini also of the centre for coming to my assistance whenever I needed them.

At this juncture I would like to thank my colleagues, Mr. Ramachandran and Ms. S.K. Shanthi for their valued help and support and my other fellow-researchers who have been a source of great encouragement during my research.

Last but not least, I would like to convey my sincere thanks to all members of my family, especially my husband and parents, whose co-operation and support have been a constant source of encouragement to me throughout my research.
