ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

When one completes a task, with the Grace of God, one sincerely feels like thanking all those who had guided, motivated, helped and supported one, all along.

Any task which requires profound intellectual guidance, a clear direction of moving a task ahead, a research attitude along with a constant passion and energy would not have been completed without the help of many talented and dedicated people. I consider myself genuinely lucky to find all the above mentioned qualities in my guide, Professor Meena Sehgal, Chairperson, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh. She has been the most important person in my long journey of research. Her inspiring brilliance, profound knowledge and admirable dedication to the subject provided a scholarly direction to this project.

I would take this as an opportunity to thank Professor Jitendra Mohan, President, Asian Association of Applied Psychology and Indian Academy of Applied Psychology, for his motivating and spirit lifting words, which influenced me to work harder, to look beyond the present circumstances, and to push myself consistently for the accomplishment of this arduous task.

I am also extremely grateful to my parents who have selflessly supported and allowed me to pursue my research and bearing my continuous absence from home. I would like to thank them with all my heart by dedicating this dissertation to them.
I would like to express my sincere thanks towards all the participants who have willingly participated in my study and made this work possible. Without their help, it would have been difficult for me to complete this research work.

Finally I would like to thank all those who helped me directly or indirectly in carrying out this task and finishing the journey, I was on.
