I wish to express my special gratitude to my supervisor Professor Meena Sehgal, Chairperson, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, India known for her intellectual pursuits, prolific writings and erudition, for her impeccable guidance, keen interest, unlimited patience, enthusiastic approach, and sustained encouragement throughout this research work. Her perseverance to go through even the minutest detail of this work and dissemination of new ideas has been of great help. But for her scholarly guidance, systematic and encouraging attitude, examining and illuminating the issues the study would not have come to fruition in its present form. I consider myself singularly fortunate and highly privileged for having the chance to have worked under her supervision. She has been the inspiring source of this research endeavour.

I express my sincere thanks to Professor Jitendra Mohan, President Asian Association of Applied Psychology for providing academic support from time to time. In addition to being an eminent psychologist, he is a well-known figure in International Psychology, respected for his precision and enduring commitment to academic values and professional development. I am grateful to him for encouragement and help through out the course of this research.

I gratefully place on record my thanks to Dr. Jayanti Dutta, Deputy Director, Academic Staff College, Panjab University, Chandigarh, and Dr. Harmander Singh, Reader, Department of Environmental Sciences, who took time out of their busy schedule to help me whenever I required. I would like to thank the faculty and the staff of Psychology Department, Panjab University, Chandigarh for extending help whenever it was sought.

In collection and consultation of the academic material I owe my thanks to many institutions and individuals from whom I derived enormous support in bringing out this research. I desire to thank the members of Library of National Council of Educational Research and Training (NCERT), Delhi; A. C. Joshi Library, Panjab University, Chandigarh, Library of Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh and Library of Department of Education, Panjab University, Chandigarh for their wholehearted promptness to meet my frequent requests for research material.

I am extremely grateful to all the respondent teachers, who have taken out their valuable time to be a part of the research and without whose contributions; this work would not have been possible.

I would like to thank my parents with utmost reverence for selfless moral support, help and good wishes. They motivated me and believed in me. I would like to thank my grandfather Shri Bhagwan Dass for his encouraging attitude during the period of this study, which enabled me to complete the present work. I would like to thank my brothers Rajneesh and Jitsu for their unstinted co-operation and a constant word of cheer, which proved to be a perennial source of inspiration. My family has been a perpetual source of encouragement and unconditional help to me, they helped me to steer away all the hurdles. They had been the foundation of the ladder of my successful venture. To them, I will be indebted for life.

I also acknowledge my sincere thanks to all my friends Arti Bhagra, Bhavna Sood, Harbeen Sidhu, Jagdish Dhaliwal, Nitasha Khela, Renu Yadav and Samridhi Beri and all the relatives who always stood by me in times of need. I would like to extend my thanks to all those by virtue of their professional expertise rendered selfless support in preparation and submission of this thesis in the present form.

Last but not the least I am grateful to the Almighty for giving me fortitude and persistence to bring this text to fruition.
