Acknowledgements

It is my humble privilege to thank and express my deepest gratitude towards my worthy supervisor Dr. Indu Bala, Reader, Department of Economics, Panjab University, Chandigarh, whose concrete and constructive suggestions, keen interest, unfailing and inspiring guidance as well as critical evaluation of entire manuscript made it possible for me to complete this work. I am highly indebted to her outstanding theoretical knowledge and research insights.

My sincere thanks are also due to Dr. Upinder Sawhney, Chairman, Department of Economics, Panjab University for all her help and encouragement. I am also grateful to all faculty members and office staff of the Department of Economics, Panjab University and all my friends who willingly provided me moral support and invaluable guidance during the period of this work.

I owe a great debt to the authorities of the libraries of IBM library, Pune, Jawahar Lal Nehru University, New Delhi, Delhi School of Economics, New Delhi, RBI library, Chandigarh, Department of Economics and University Business School, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for readily providing me with necessary facilities for this dissertation. I also express my appreciation for all those who have done allied research studies in India and abroad, for their works gave a positive direction to my research project.

I find it difficult to express a short acknowledgement for my uncle Late Sh S.D. Rampal, Sr Manager, Punjab National Bank, who had not only been giving me a continuous and constant encouragement, but also had been actively assisting me in this venture. My parents, my wife, brothers and sisters too morally supported me during the entire span of my study and I find myself wordless to express my appreciation towards them.

Last but not the least, professional skill and excellent piece of type work on the part of Mr. Jignesh also deserve my strong appreciation.
