ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

‘Writing is painfully easy,’ Gene Fowler once said, ‘All you do is stare at a blank sheet of paper until drops of blood form on your forehead.’ Luckily, a number of benevolent souls persuaded me through the pain and pleasure of this endeavour, and as a result, I had no loss of haemoglobin. All my family members and friends afforded me wisdom, encouragement and joy when I most needed them. I express my heart-felt gratitude to them. Words always fall short when I try to express my genuine and sincere feelings for those who have contributed a lot in making me a better human being. Yet I take this opportunity to thank all those who have enabled me to accomplish this Ph.D. Thesis successfully.

During the days of rigorous study, God showered upon me his choicest blessings in the form of Keertan, a baby boy who silently observed me growing as a research scholar. I was constantly tempted by two charming forces—sane books and smiling baby. The study of Humanism helped me find equilibrium between knowledge and love. I value his dedication most and wish to accompany him soon in his most naïve childhood adventures. I would also like to express my gratitude to my wife Dr. Binal for bestowing love, encouragement and constant support. I am indebted to the unrestrained support, immense comfort and ease she provided to me. Her unwavering faith in God, devotion, patience and humility has become source of inspiration for me. I am very much thankful to my sister Bharti and brother-in-law Jitendrakumar because they have really reduced my anxiety and filled me with enthusiasm to reach my desired and most aspired goal. I am much inspired by my elder brother Sureshbhai’s unshakable patience and unmatchable commitment towards our family. He has helped me to sustain positive energy in the midst of all the adversities. Though he lives abroad his constant concern has made me believe that understanding is the shortest distance between two people. I offer my deepest gratitude to my Principal Dr. Geeta Mehta, HOD Prof. Usha Pillai and Librarian G. S. Chauhan for their constant support and encouragement. I must mention my association with saints of BAPS Swaminarayan Sanstha. These holy and scholarly personalities have been shaping me for more than two decades with their wisdom and devotion.

It’s a matter of great satisfaction that I am a student of Dr. Indira Nityanandam, my guide who allowed me the entire freedom of choice in writing this thesis. Her scholarly knowledge of English language and literature supplied the best of guidance that I needed for completing my thesis. Without her constant follow-up, I could not have sustained my self-confidence and produce my second literary contribution. She has taught me how to pursue my goal without losing courage and climb the ladder of success.

Man is so self-centred that he always forgets God. When there is no ray of hope and he realizes that all the doors to success are closed Man seeks God at last. God loves us so much that he forgives all our blunders and reaches earliest when we really need him. My personal experience is not different than what I have expressed in the above lines. With great reverence I remember my spiritual guru His Supreme Divine Holiness Param Pujya Pramukh Swami Maharaj who is life-giving force to me. In his presence doubts dissolve, confusions clear, hurts heal and the mind finds rest. I am convinced that his blessings have made this task easy and enjoyable. I am very fortunate that Param Pujya Pramukh Swami Maharaj has blessed this thesis personally on the day of its submission.
Writing this thesis may be ‘painfully easy,’ but with the cup of compassion that God, Guru, Guide, family, and friends have afforded me; the ‘painful’ part is really made easier!
