Acknowledgements

It is indeed a pleasure to thank the many people who have made this thesis possible.

I am forever indebted to Dr. J.M. Jerath, Retd. Professor, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh for being an inspiration, for providing encouragement, sound advice and good teaching. His capacity to combine critique with an immediate empathy and commitment towards students and others engaged in hard work and struggle will always inspire me. Thank you doesn't seem sufficient but it is said with appreciation and respect.

A very special thank you to Dr. Prahshjot Malhi, Additional Professor, Department of Pediatrics, Post Graduate Institute of Medical Education and Research, Chandigarh. It was under her tutelage that I developed a focus and became interested in a graduate career in psychological research. She took me on the process of learning and constantly challenged me to set my benchmark even higher. She always made herself available even through a very heavy travel, work and teaching schedule. Dr. Malhi has helped me immensely by giving me encouragement and friendship. She mirrored back my ideas so I heard them aloud, an important process for me in shaping this PhD work. I learned to believe in my future, my work and myself. Thank you ma'am. This thesis is a small tribute to an exceptional teacher from a student always anxious to learn from you.

I wish to place on record my gratitude to Dr. Promila Vasudeva and Dr. Krishan Vasudeva, Their guidance and support enabled me to bypass the more persistent obstacles to thesis completion.

I have been fortunate in receiving the wisdom, guidance and suggestions from accomplished professionals working with children. The valuable insights provided by Dr. Pratibha Singh, Dr. Bhavneet Bharti, Dr. Neeraj Kumar, Dr. Jagriti, and Dr. Kulpreet Dhillon have enriched this research work.

I am grateful to the many parents, teachers and doctors who over the past years have welcomed me into their homes, schools, offices and clinics as a researcher and a friend. This study drew upon their knowledge and experiences. It is indeed impossible to reference the knowledge and insights gained from ongoing conversations with them.
The understanding gained through these experiences has formed the vital background to this study. Although too numerous to name, every child who participated in this study is appreciated for his or her individual contribution.

I am thankful for the very willing assistance and co-operation extended by Ms. Archana Katyal, Ms. Salima Kalyan, Mr. Anil Shetty, Mr. Deepak Sharma, Ms. Smita Gupta, and Dr. Prasoon Goyadi during various phases of this PhD work.

Many thanks to the Chairperson, faculty and staff at the Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh; and at the Department of Pediatrics, Post Graduate Institute of Medical Education and Research, Chandigarh.

My student colleagues - Jasleen Kaur and Sabina Manchanda deserve a special mention for providing a stimulating and fun environment in which to learn and grow.

I wish to acknowledge and thank my entire extended family for providing me with a loving environment. The warm support of all my aunts, uncles, cousins and friends enabled me to complete this thesis and have a wonderful time along the way. I wish I could mention each individually, but will throw a large party instead.

In particular, I wish to express my gratitude to Ms. Simran Sidhu and Mr. Harshdeep Singh Jawanda for all the emotional support, camaraderie, distraction, and caring they provided.

Most importantly, I am forever grateful to my grandparents, whose foresight and values paved the way for a privileged education, and to my parents who bore me, raised me, supported me, taught me, loved me, and instilled in me a lifelong sense of values and integrity while being respectful of my thoughts, outlandish dreams, and desires. They have always encouraged and supported me, giving me free reign, and the freedom to make my own choices in life.

Undertaking and working on this research has been a humbling and enriching experience and I thank God for providing me the fortitude, strength and perseverance to bring this task to completion.
