Acknowledgements

I am thankful to all my friends who piloted my research study. My chief indebtedness is to my research supervisor Dr. CLN Prakash, for his expertise that has enabled me produce this research work. The suggestion and security he provided during the course of this research study encouraged me immensely. I am extremely grateful to him for his valuable contribution in terms of ideas and organization of the entire thesis. Without his motivation, good-humour, and perspicacity, this study would never have been possible.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. Vimala Rao, Head of the Department of English, Bangalore University for her support during my FIP period. My friends and colleagues have always been a source of inspiration to me but I regret there is no room to honour each one by name.

I appreciate the timely help of my friend Ms. Lalitha Murthy for introducing me to Dr. CLN Prakash.

The support of my colleagues during the period of FIP is also much appreciated. I should like to make special mention of our college Principal, Dr. B.S. Srikanta, my very close friends Malati, Sivagami and Sudha for their valuable comments and companionship.
The workshops I conducted on "Communicative Language Teaching" for practising teachers at a few schools has been a stimulus to organize my ideas on English Language Teaching in India. The data on which this study is based have been collected over a long period with many people, who may well not recognize their own contributions to the success of this project. Much of what I have written has been inspired by the many teachers and students with whom I have interacted over the years - as colleagues, in seminars and at meetings in many places, or through correspondence. Each of these in one way or another has led me to reflect more deeply on this study. To all of you, wherever you may now be, I owe grateful thanks.

I am also thankful to Ms. Gayatri Devi, Director, RIE, Bangalore, for permitting me to make use of the library whenever I needed to. The librarians Ms. Kalavathi and Ms. Chandra deserve special mention. I especially thank The British Library, Bangalore which gave me facilities while I was writing this thesis, and I benefited greatly from their support service too.

The task of writing this thesis was made much easier by the support and understanding of my family, especially my mother for her constant encouragement, and whose enthusiasm kept my own enthusiasm from flagging. I fondly remember and acknowledge the affection of my mother-in-law, my sisters, my sisters-in-law, my brothers-in-law, my nieces and my nephews.

Finally I have simultaneous personal and professional acknowledgements to make - to my husband Varadarajan, whose affection, encouragement and untiring support have been indispensable and to my daughter Priya, for the stimulating discussions and very valuable suggestions. Her pertinent observation and critical comment enabled quick editing. I cannot forget the hospitality showered on me by my son-in-law Vinay particularly during the completion of this research work.

And my very special thanks go to little Vibu, my granddaughter, whose innocent spontaneous laughter relieved me of the tedium of writing.
